LONDON POLICE CHARGE CROWD

Fascist Demonstration Causes Street Clash

London, Oct. 4.

In Fascist disorders to-day there have been 53 arrests and numbers injured. —Reuter.

DEMONSTRATION BANNED

London, Oct. 4.

The number of arrests in the Fascist demonstration in the East End of London now total 69.

This demonstration was banned by the authorities at the last minute and police twice charged the crowd with batons to disperse it. There were a number injured, including nine hospital cases. —Reuter.

Protests Sent

The Jewish People's Council sent a petition, signed by 100,000 people, to the Home Office yesterday, protesting against the proposed Fascist parade in the East End of London. The Independent Labour Party announced a counter-demonstration. Fears of serious clashes led to extraordinary police precautions being taken, and 5,000 policemen were drafted to the area where it was suspected trouble might occur.

Batons Wielded

The most exciting incident of the day was the police charge, with batons swinging, to clear Royal Mint Street.

When Sir Oswald Mosley, the Fascist leader, arrived on the scene, he conversed with the Police Commissioner, who intimated that the parade in the East End must not take place. The Fascists would be allowed to march to Blackfriars and disperse on the embankment, however. Police made a second baton charge when the crowd in Leaman Street attempted to release one of the arrested men. —Reuter.

Rioting in Paris

Paris, Oct. 4.

Police arrested 1,300 persons this afternoon in the course of rioting between Communists and members of Colonel de la Roquette's Social Party, formerly the Croix de Feu. The latter attempted to prevent Communists staging a giant meeting at the Parc des Princes, by barricading the streets leading to the place of assembly, thus coming into conflict with the police.

There were a number of minor casualties, but it is officially stated that no-one was seriously injured. —Reuter.

Prices Soar In N. Y. Market

HIGHEST LEVELS IN FIVE YEARS

New York, October 3. Prices soared to highest levels since 1931, on the New York Stock Exchange to-day.

Wall Street demonstrated the most bullish sentiment in a very active session, with foreign buying increasing, automobile production and steel production figures mounting and improving earnings returns providing the encouraging factors.

The Bond Market and issues on the Exchange were also higher.

Japanese Held In Raid

A sensational incident occurred in the city on Friday, when a Japanese tourist was detained by the police following a swoop on a waterfront club.

The Japanese, who was later released, was allegedly taking prohibited photographs of the Harbour when the police arrived. The camera and films have been confiscated. [Exclusive Story on Page 7.]

Dorado Delays H.K. Flight

The R. M. A. Dorado, carrying mails from Europe, India, Malaya and Australia, did not leave Penang this morning for Hongkong, but will take off early to-morrow morning in an attempt to make a one day flight. She is due in Hongkong late to-morrow afternoon.

Declares Adventure Distorted BY IMAGINATIVE PASSENGERS

"Our fellow passengers aboard the Nellore have vivid imagination, and too much time on their hands for gossip," was the bitter comment made by Miss S. Clark when informed of the story, related to a morning newspaper representative by passengers aboard the Nellore, of the alleged experiences of Miss Clark and her companion, Miss L. Hablethwaite, in Manila.

"What was nothing more than a startling experience has been magnified and distorted by passengers aboard this ship, and by newspapers throughout the Far East, into a terrible calumny."

"We have carefully refrained from telling anybody but the Master of this ship what actually happened. We enabled our people in Brisbane in order to allay the fears occasioned there by erroneous reports in Australian papers but not another soul has been told anything."

"Yet some of the people aboard this ship seem to know everything," said Miss Clark.

Passengers aboard the Nellore related to Hongkong newspapers a strange story of how the two ladies, who had visited the famous Sun Anna Cabaret in Manila, were allegedly "doped" with cigarettes by two men, and then taken to a strange house.

Miss Hablethwaite, according to the passengers' stories, leapt from the third storey window of the house and injured herself in the fall.

Neither Miss Clark nor Miss Hablethwaite would comment on the accuracy of the report.

"All I can say is that we went through a dreadful experience. Nevertheless there has been much exaggeration," said Miss Clark.

"We escaped in time, and were very lucky to do so."

"Now we want to forget all about it. We came to the East for a vacation and want to enjoy the rest of it."

"We are leaving the Nellore in Japan and will stay there for a month before returning to Australia. Maybe by then all the excitement will have died down."

"The only thing we are worried about is the reports that have been sent to Australia. We have enabled reassuring messages to our people, but we don't want our friends to believe that all sorts of dreadful things have happened to us. They haven't."

REBELS EXECUTE CAPTIVES RUTHLESS POLICY AT TOLEDO

St. Jean de Luz, Oct. 4.

Ninety Government militiamen, who surrendered when the seminary at Toledo in which they were holding out against the rebel advance caught fire, are reported to have been executed.

Earlier reports said they had been consumed alive in the flames, preferring this death to surrender. A number of other militiamen who were surrounded and made prisoner during the insurgent advance, are also reported to have been summarily shot. —Reuter.

NOTED U.S. DIPLOMAT DIES IN N.Y.

J. ISIDOR STRAUSS WIDELY KNOWN

New York, Oct. 4. Mr. Jesse Isidor Strauss, until recently United States Ambassador to Paris, died here to-day. —Reuter.

Jesse Isidor Strauss, the American business man who became an Ambassador, was born in New York in January, 1872. He studied at Harvard where he took his B.A. degree in 1893. His father and mother were drowned in the Titanic disaster in 1912.

Strauss joined the dry goods firm of R. H. Macy and Co., started at the bottom of the ladder, determined to learn all the details of the business, and by 1910 had become its president. He and his two brothers managed the great store which employs 10,000 people.

In search for novelties—new goods or new models—he travelled much in Europe, especially in France, Germany, England and Spain. He speaks several languages.

But buying and selling were not his sole preoccupation. He was a collector and also a politician. A strong Democrat, he supported Roosevelt's campaign for the Presidency by speeches and generous gifts to the party funds. During the banking crisis in the spring of 1933 he did his best to exert a calming influence. When all the banks closed, he inserted a notice in the newspapers, which ran:

"I have confidence in my Government and in our banks. I do not expect the impossible. Never has it been possible for everyone to put all his money in his pockets or his safe. I know that if I try to obtain all my money, I shall make the situation worse. I shall not lose my head. In March, 1933, he was appointed Ambassador to France.

Strauss provided the funds for extensions at Harvard University, of whose Board of Overseers he was a member. He also belongs to the Council on Foreign Relations, the American Policy Association and the American Academy of Political and Social Science. His business interests included directorships in the New York Life Insurance Co. and the North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. He is also a trustee of a savings bank and a hospital.

ONE HAND ON TITLE

These are the New York Yankees, whose three straight victories over the New York Giants since their defeat in the first game of the World Series, places them within one step of the 1936 championship. This is one of the greatest teams ever assembled, they have played before the biggest crowds in baseball's history during the past few days, and they will have the biggest "pennant purse," their share of the gate receipts of the World Series, ever divided, according to predictions. If they win to-day the series will be over.

HITLER DEMANDS UNITY

COMPLETE FAITH IN 4-YEAR PLAN WARNING TO PEASANTRY

Berlin, Oct. 4. Rain and bitter wind marred the Harvest Festival, celebrated throughout Germany, tonight. Adolf Hitler, delivered an oration to 500,000 peasants on Bueckeburg Hill, from which point his speech was broadcast to all parts of the country.

He directed a large part of his address to these peasants who resented official price-fixing on their products and declared that if the German harvest dropped twenty per cent it would spell catastrophe.

Referring to the four-year plan, Dr. Goebbels said that within the year enumerable, gigantic raw material factories would supply Germany with what she was lacking.

"After a year we shall rise like a granite rock of order and stability in a world which may be more restless," he promised. —Reuter Special.

Japanese Ask More Protection

BOMB PLANTED BY CONSUL'S HOME UNEASINESS IN SHANGHAI

Shanghai, Oct. 3. Strong representations were made on Thursday by Mr. Suehiko Takaki, the Japanese Consul at Changsha, to Gen. Ho Chien, Chairman of the Hunan Provincial Government, regarding the finding of a bomb 4 ft. from the Consul's residence, on September 29.

The bomb, said to have been wrapped in a handkerchief, was found by a Chinese passer-by on a grass plot by a path between the Consul's residence and the consulate. The man immediately notified the Bureau of Public Safety, who quietly removed the bomb.

The matter came to the knowledge of Mr. Takaki, resulting in the dispatch of Gen. Ho. Pointing out that the finding of a bomb was a serious matter, especially in view of recent anti-Japanese outbreaks in the province, Mr. Takaki asked Gen. Ho why he had attempted to hush up the matter.

Gen. Ho, it was reported, sought to minimize the affair.

YANKEES MAKING SURE OF WORLD BASEBALL TITLE

WIN THIRD STRAIGHT IN FIGHT WITH GIANTS

New York, Oct. 4.

The New York Yankees to-day won the fourth game of the World Series, establishing a three to one lead against the New York Giants. The Yanks smashed Carl Hubbell's pitching all over the diamond and the Giants' ace hurler was relieved in the eighth inning when he showed signs of going completely to pieces.

Yankees scored five times on eighteen hits and the Giants scored twice on seven.

The feature of the game was Hubbell's failure. Gabler came out in the eighth when the mighty Hubbell had allowed eight hits and four runs in seven innings.

Lou Gehrig hit his second home run of the series, scoring two runs, in the third inning. The Yankees then led four to nothing, Selkirk and Rolfe having batted in tallies in the second and third.

Bartell scored in the fourth for the Giants on Ripple's single, and in the eighth Sam Leslie, pinch-hitting for Hubbell, got home on a hit of Terry's.

ATTACKS CUSTOMS BARRIER

FRANCE URGING FREER TRADE PROSPERITY FORMULA

Paris, Oct. 4.

Appealing to all nations to follow the example of the French Republic and lower their customs barriers, M. Spinasse, the Minister of National Economy in a nation-wide broadcast to-night, said international conversations had already begun.

They would be concluded within a few weeks, and prosperity would then become a fact. —Reuter.

SWISS POLICY

The devaluation of the Swiss franc presents itself mainly as an operation of alignment on the leading world currencies, says a local authority. The legal gold cover is not modified and will remain at 40 per cent. The limits of the devaluation of the new level, which in fact, stands at 30 per cent, under old parity, will allow the Swiss cost of production, formerly too high, a sufficient adaptation to the world situation to enable the revival of business and bring new impetus to exports.

Banking activities and dealings in gold or in securities shall be in no way restricted, as the monetary situation remains very solid while the reserve of gold is maintained at its very high level. The Government's persistently prudent financial policy and the sound budgetary situation furnish the strongest guarantees of security.

All the necessary measures have been taken to avoid a rise in the cost of living.

TWO MOTORING MISHAPS MAN AND WOMAN INJURED

Two traffic accidents occurred on Sunday in Kowloon. While walking in Shanghai Street yesterday, a man, To Tang-iat, 29, was knocked down by bus No. 266. He was taken to the Kowloon Hospital for treatment.

A woman, Chang Fong, of 613 Canton Road, was knocked down by private car No. 2301 driven by a Mr. Brown. The accident occurred in Nathan Road during a shower of rain. The victim was admitted to the Kowloon Hospital for treatment.

The Yankees also scored in the eighth, Gehrig hitting a double and getting home on a single by Powell. Pearson, recovered from his recent injury, pitched a fine game for the Yankees with seven strike-outs compared with Hubbell's two. Hubbell's defeat was his first this season since July.

The attendance broke the World Series record established yesterday, 66,669 spectators paying $240,591 for seats. —Reuter.

Hubbell Fails

New York, Oct. 4.

With the great Carl Hubbell pitching to the greatest catcher of the year, Vincente, New York Giants made a bid to even the World Series to-day, but failed miserably. The Yankees' combination, Pearson and Dickey, was unbeatable. The following is the story of the game by innings:

Gehrig smashed the next ball over the fences. Dickey lined to Moore. Powell was taken on a low fly by Ripple, who made a great shoe-string catch and turned a complete somersault. Three runs, three hits, no errors.

FOURTH INNING

"THINGS to COME!"

THE women of Mayfair have lost their heads completely over black. They know very well that they should be wearing colours again by now, but apparently they do not know how to get out of the sombre colour that started with the death of King George V. Everywhere one goes, in London there are all the women wearing black.

Their primary subject of conversation is "black." They ask each other whether it will be better to order clothes for the season in colours or not. They all say that they do not wish to age, mourning, and yet not one of them has the gumption to go back into colours. The difficulties of the situation have been aggravated by London designers, who are showing collections in black, white and mauve, and are substituting the bright tulips of the Paris show with violets for England.

At one important Dress Opening at least 70 per cent. of the collection was black, and the same was true of the clothes worn by the audience. Lady Warwick, Miss Peggy Johnson, the Duchess of Westminster, Lady Edward Hay and Lady Jersey were just a few of the younger women who were all dressed in black frocks with small black hats, most of them wore long mink coats. I have come across Mrs. Charles Swecny at several first nights, and also out dancing, she hardly ever wears dark colours, but each time I have seen her she was dressed in black. One dress was black net, slim fitting to the knees, then flounced out to the floor.

JANE GORDON

Lady Veronica Moraby is one of the few young women who have enough courage to wear white. She was also out dancing in a slinky white satin dress with little frills around the hem, which continued half-way up the back of the skirt. She also has a charming little waist-length mink jacket with short sleeves which she wears when she goes to the theatre.

To give you some idea of the season's evening coats Angrave has sketched two models just to show you how different they can be. One is a knee-length coat made entirely of tightly ruffled chiffon with all the edges cut so that they stand out like stiffly exotic feathers. It is cut tight fitting to the waist, then flared out to the hem. The sleeves are long, and the colour is dark bottle green, worn with a sulphur-coloured dress.

The other coat is full length, and made of the stiffest slipper satin in vivid blue or pink. There is a high yoke at the back, and then the skirt is put in with great folds. Ruffles edge the neck, yoke, sleeves and hem.

The evening dress sketched is in light tan-coloured flat crepe, and gives you an idea of the type of drapery which will be most fashionable this season. Enormous folds hanging from one shoulder are looped up again to the waist. The full skirt hanging in a panel from the centre back is draped up between the feet like Turkish trousers. The bodice is high in front, low at the back, and bloused over at the waist.

THERE is a Paris dress house called Alix, whose clothes are greatly admired by the Hollywood film stars. I think in a very short time we will be seeing their models in London. This season Alix's collection is highly eccentric, exotic and beautiful. The evening gowns are mostly in soft white or pale pastel materials draped in many yards from the shoulder to waist or else looped up between the feet in the Turkish style. One dress has a drapery that looks like a transparent cloak. This can be taken from the shoulders and worn round the waist, forming a kind of second skirt.

A crinoline gown is made of many layers of organza heavily folded at the edge over stiffening. One layer of black is placed over two layers of white, and the hem is decorated by strips of coloured taffeta arranged like a rainbow. Heavy silk mosquito netting and head-netting are used for evening coats and cloaks. One black net cape is worn over a vest of sequins. A long-waisted evening coat is skirted with head netting falling to the ground.

The day clothes are less exotic and pleasantly practical, olive green and a dark shade of mauve being the most popular colours. Some of the suits have short-waisted jackets flaring out for ten inches below the waist. This exaggerated flare is sometimes used for a tiny cape or collar. The sleeves are accentuated above the elbow. Many of the frocks have front draperies. One has heavy folds swinging loose from the neck to the hem, the dress underneath being tightly belted.

Fish To-day

Halibut and Mushrooms

Ingredients—Four halibut steaks, pepper and salt, parsley, lemon juice, 3oz. margarine.
Wash and dry the halibut and dust each side with salt and pepper. Melt a little margarine in a fire-proof dish and put in the halibut. Place the remainder of the melted margarine on top and put the fire-proof dish under a red hot grill. Baste well during grilling, re-season with salt and pepper and add a squeeze of lemon juice. Turn halibut now and again so that both sides are basted and become golden brown and crisp. When done garnish with chopped parsley, and serve in the same dish that it was grilled in with the remaining margarine and lemon juice round it. (Sufficient for four persons.)

Fry mushrooms in hot margarine and serve round the halibut.

Savoury Turbot

Ingredients—Cold turbot, or any other white fish, parsley, 2 back rashers of bacon, pepper and salt, 4 tablespoonsful breadcrumbs, 2 tablespoonsful rice, 2 ozs. melted margarine.

Fry the bacon and cut it into shreds. Cook the rice in a little boiling water till tender. Flake the fish, taking care to remove all the bones. Drain the rice well and mix it with the fish and breadcrumbs. Add parsley, finely chopped, and season well with salt and pepper. Lastly, add the melted margarine. Brush well several scallop shells with mixture into each; cover with white breadcrumbs and place small pieces of margarine on top.
Bake at the top of oven for five or six minutes at moderate temperature (Regulo mark 5), and then place under a hot grill till a golden brown. Garnish with a little chopped parsley mixed with a little chopped hard boiled yolk of egg. Serve very hot.

Multiplication Tables

RECENTLY I was invited to have dinner in the sky-scraper apartment of a New York actress.

Directly I entered the tiny living-room of the flat I noticed two unusual features. One, the absence of a dining table. Two, a frosted glass panel, decorated with hand painted designs and lit from behind, let into one wall.

At dinner-time a coloured servant entered, pressed a wall-button and eased the glass panel out of the wall. Two chromium legs came with it, clicked into place, and supported the newly-appeared dining table.

Hinged on its lower side, fitting snugly into the wall, this novel table was composed of a thin, hollow slab of strong glass, illuminated by strip lights. Scratch-, stain- and heat-proof, of course, and throwing upwards a complexion-kind peach glow.

All kinds of glass, wood or metal tables can be let into the wall with only minor plasterers' operations, painted, cellulosed or decorated so as to form a part of the room's scheme, and let down easily at meal times to accommodate six or seven people.

Even simpler, of course, is the "wall-panel table," which is not actually built into the wall, but folds up flush against it. I have seen tables of this kind, made of plain veneered woods, which, even in their folded state, are an asset to their rooms.

One of the most ingenious normal-ly resembles a tall, shallow piece of furniture rather like a wardrobe, fitting up against the wall. Necks of cupboard surround three long, vertical panels.

At meal times the centre panel pulls out and down and is supported on folding legs to form a table. Smaller panels on either side turn into cushioned benches for six people.

As each panel pulls out it reveals a number of small shelves for dining services and cutlery.

The sideboard-table has come to stay. In the most usual model two thicknesses of table-top pull out horizontally from it, and are supported on steel runners and two folding legs to make a table for five.

I have kept the simplest of all until the end. It is a light, wood table for six with slab supports at each end. By turning two screws you can fold these supports flat beneath the top, so that the whole thing tucks easily beneath a divan.

Chained Woman "Kidnapped": Liner Battle

Fight With Sailors On Decks: One Missing When Ship Sails

MAX SCHMELING SEES A RIOT

MAN'S EVENING SUIT TORN: WOMEN BEATEN

New York, Sept. 12. A WOMAN who took part with 150 Communist agitators in a sensational battle aboard the departing German liner Bremen early to-day as a protest against Nazi interference in Spain was later found to be missing.

The woman, who followed the example of the ringleaders of the demonstration in chaining herself to the rails of the liner, was last seen being beaten in the efforts to clear the ship of shouting men and women.

Mr. Allan Taub, lawyer for the arrested Communists, expressed fears that she was a prisoner of the enraged German sailors aboard the Bremen.

The sensational demonstration was staged a few minutes before the Bremen was due to sail. At a prearranged signal, the 150 men and women, who had boarded the liner with passengers, threw off outer garments and exposed white sweaters inscribed with anti-Nazi phrases.

The women, chanting "Down with Nazi intervention in Spain," began screaming hysterically when officers ordered them from the ship. One of them hit an officer in the face, and in a few seconds there was turmoil.

Barrers were unfurled and then used as weapons against the German sailors. Women shackled themselves to the ship's rails, and sailors brought blow-torches to liberate them.

DRAWN INTO FIGHT
An American, Mr. Allen Stuart, who had gone aboard in evening dress to see friends off, was drawn into the fight, and emerged with his suit in tatters.

German boxing hero, Max Schmeling, walked up the gangplank when the battle was at its height. He stood and clenched and unclenched the fists that felled Joe Louis.

He seemed about to join the fight but caution got the better of him, and he hurried to his cabin.

Police declared that the riot was much fiercer than a similar disturbance aboard the Bremen a year ago when the Nazi flag was torn down.

They investigated reports by witnesses that life preservers and pieces of lead pipe were used by sailors to subdue the frenzied women.

Nameless Ship MOSCOW ORDERS DELETION

A Soviet ship sailing the seas without a name—she is—was the cargo vessel, Alexey Rykov, London, her name had been painted out. Only her port of registration, Leningrad, was left.

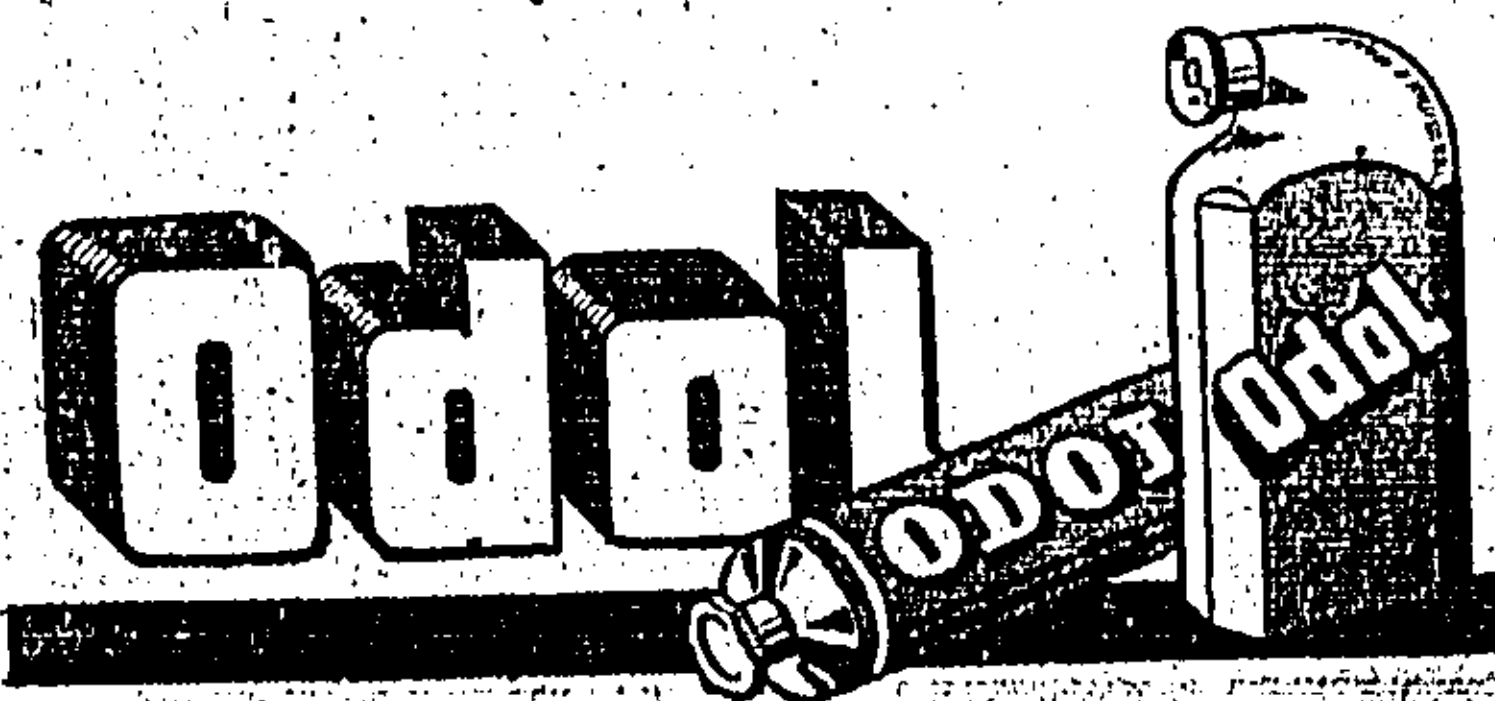

Seamanlike superstition, disliking any change of name, is not so strong as the world of Moscow. Rykov was one of the former Soviet politicians denounced during the recent terrorist trial. Therefore the Alexey Rykov must find another name.

The Karl Marx, also, strangely enough, a Soviet vessel, has not had her name changed. But before she became the Karl Marx she was called Diana, goddess of moonshine.

BEAUTY QUEEN SPY'S SUICIDE

"Husband Betrayed For Country"

Paris, Sept. 20. DEATH has set its seal on the drama of Mme. Cridlig, the blonde beauty queen aged 20, convicted of espionage against France.

Broken with remorse at having supplied the evidence which brought five years' imprisonment for her husband and a sentence for herself, she swam out from the fashionable promenade at Rabat yesterday and allowed herself to drown.

A friend said to-day: "Her husband, a sergeant-major in an anti-aircraft regiment, would never have been tried for espionage had it not been for the fact that Mme. Cridlig became friendly with a young French army officer."

"PREYED ON MIND"

"They went out for motor rides together, and the outcome was that she intercepted a letter from her husband to a German agent, which led to Cridlig's imprisonment."

"It preyed on her mind, although I told her that she had betrayed her husband for the sake of her country."

When the news of his wife's death was broken to him last night, Sergeant-Major Cridlig said: "I knew she bitterly regretted what she had done."

Beer Is Not A Medicine

—EXPERTS

Washington, Sept. 20. The federal government has formally decided that beer is no medicine for a Hollywood siren trying to reduce her hips.

The government held that beer is beer and mighty fine stuff, indeed, but that anybody who claims it will turn a fat lady into a slim one isn't much interested in her waistline.

The decision was handed down by the Federal Trade Commission in the case of the Cereal Products Refining Co., San Francisco, and Associated Distributing Companies, which had pleaded California with billboards saying their beer was made with a non-fattening formula.

The commission said these posters also called the attention of passers-by to the tendency of Acme beer to "slenderize" those who quaffed it.

The Federal Trade Commission's experts drank a lot of this beer and didn't lose any weight. They analyzed it and decided:

"It's just an ordinary beer."

The beer brewers are touchy folks on the subject of what is fattening and what is not, so the commission worded its complaint carefully, thus:

"All beer, including 'Acme' cannot be truthfully represented as non-fattening for all purposes. Increase in weight, unless consideration is given to the individual dietary habits, physiological idiosyncrasies and fat-producing tendencies of beer consumers."

Acme beer, being plain beer, the commission continued, does contain properties which are capable of being converted into fat, while it has no ingredients which cause hips to fade away.

The American Brewers' Association said it did not want to be involved in Acme's private fight with the government, but it was quick to point out that "beer is no more fattening than any other nourishing food."

Henry C. Hallan, the secretary, read from scientific opinion to prove that beer contains only a small trace of fat.

"Although a person who is undernourished might gain weight drinking beer, that would be because the beer better aids him to digest his food," he added.—United Press.

"Prisoner" Cannot Go to Prison

ADMISSION REFUSED

The tangled affairs of a man who has offered to return to Wallasey, Liverpool, four times recently, in order to complete his sentence, but who has not been allowed to do so, are likely to be straightened out in a day or two.

George W. Santus, a 35-year-old motor mechanic, of Blackburn-road, Ormskirk, was sentenced at Liverpool on July 23, to three months' hard labour, for alleged loitering with criminal intent. He pleaded guilty, but four days after he began to serve his sentence he decided to appeal.

He was granted bail and left the prison.

The Appeals Committee then ruled that the appeal could not be heard as he had not secured bail within 21 days of conviction.

Santus then attempted to return to prison, but the prison authorities apparently had no authority to accept him.

Mr. H. Singleton, Clerk to the Blackpool Magistrates, stated that it had been suggested by the prison authorities that he should issue another commitment order, but he did not think he was entitled to do so.

Santus attempted to surrender to the Church (Lancashire) police and they communicated with Blackpool. The police could not act, however, as there was no commitment order in existence against Santus.

During the civil war in Spain, Soviet Russia sent its first ambassador to Spain, Mr. Marcello Rosenberg is being greeted by the crowds, flanked by the Communist salute, when leaving the Presidential Palace in Madrid after having presented his credentials.

REBUILDING ADDIS ABABA

Planned As Garden City

ROME TO FOOT THE BILL

Rome, Sept. 21. Addis Ababa, the capital of the new Italian Empire, is in the process of transformation and glimpses of its ultimate splendour when it will be converted into a garden city are shown in the town plan which has been approved by the Duce.

Experts have already returned to Rome from Addis Ababa after studying the project, and only the rains prevent it being put into execution.

The City of Rome will pay for this new Addis Ababa. The only buildings that will be spared from the pickaxe will be the Imperial Palace and the Cathedral Church of St. George, "so as to signify the complete domination of Italy over the Abyssinian empire."

The nerve centre of the town will be a huge square, with radiating lines to all the other quarters, which will be known as the "Square of the Victory." Here a Fascist bell tower will be built, which will ring when parades or anniversaries are to be celebrated.

The square will be surrounded by arcades, so that people can go round it even when it rains, and on these arcades two-storey premises will be built, where the administrative and governmental work of the new empire will be transacted.

The Imperial Palace will be converted into a residence for the Emperor, and will occupy a prominent place in the square. The main artery of the town will be the Maconen Road, in memory of the Ras of that name who was faithful to the Italians during the 1895 campaign.

ARMS FACTORIES
This will be the Cathedral, where a magnificent public garden will be made. Nearby, the commercial section of the city will rise, but Italy's ambition does not rest here. The town will be dotted with little parks where tropical plants will flower in order array.

Near the station, also, to be reconstructed, there will arise an industrial zone. Arms factories will be included.

Addis Ababa will boast six barracks of huge dimensions, and there will be two residential quarters, one exclusively for the Abyssinians, and the other for the Italians, so that the two will not mix. The native quarter has yet to be studied, as it has to be ascertained how many Abyssinians will even be allowed to reside in the capital. For the Italian accommodation will be made for about 200,000 people, and they will have little two-storey houses surrounded by gardens.

Finally, Addis Ababa will not be a walled city, as it is expected that once it is reconstructed it will have to be enlarged, and one of the main features will be that, although some of the houses will be very large, none will be higher than two storeys.

Confidence May Fade at 57
"Fifty-seven is an age when men sometimes lose confidence in themselves."

Dr. Philip Barlow, deputy coroner, made the remark recently at the Paddington inquest on Mr. Norman Spicer, father of Miss Dorothy Spicer, the airwoman.

Mr. Spicer was 57. He died after falling from a window in St. John's Wood. "Suicide while of unsound mind" was the verdict.

It was suggested that Mr. Spicer thought wrongly that his business was becoming less successful.

JAPANESE DESIRES IN HONGKOW

The Foreign Relations Committee of the Japanese Residents Corporation has decided to urge the Corporation to seek an increase in the number of Japanese plain clothes policemen in the S.M.P. A proposal to ask for the appointment of Japanese to head the District Road, Hongkew, and Yungtze-poo Road police stations of the S.M.P. was, however, shelved for a more thorough investigation.

A petition on similar lines was addressed on September 23 to Mr. Stirling Peckenden, Secretary-General of the Shanghai Municipal Council, by the Federation of Amalgamated Japanese Street Unions, the communication pointing out that the adoption of these measures would increase the effectiveness of police protection.

C. W. A. Scott who has again proven his almost superhuman ability to win Air Marathons, paid definite tribute to the supreme value of 'Ovaltine.' On his arrival in Johannesburg he immediately acknowledged the great help which 'Ovaltine' had given him in his magnificent achievement.

Just as on an equally famous occasion when Scott partnered by the late Capt. Black won the England to Melbourne Air-race, 'Ovaltine' played its part in giving the fliers abundant energy for their ordeal.

Practical experience in many other notable feats of endurance, and in all conditions of everyday life, has proved that 'Ovaltine' is unequalled for maintaining perfect physical fitness and abundant vitality.

CONVENT BAZAAR NEW HOSPITAL CEREMONY

The thirteenth annual bazaar at the Convent of the Chinese Sisters of the Precious Blood was held on Saturday afternoon under the patronage of the Rt. Rev. Mgr. H. Valtorta and the chairmanship of Mr. Tse Yung-kwong. The function was intended to raise funds in aid of the children's hospital, clinic and orphanage, and it was well patronised. Before the bazaar was opened, the foundation stone of the new hospital, which is being built on the Sisters' ground adjoining the Convent, at Yuen Chow Street, Shamshulpo, was laid by Bishop H. Valtorta. Many people were present at this ceremony.

The bazaar was organised by the Sisters, with the assistance of many school girls. There were various stalls of knitted and embroidered articles for sale at reasonable prices, while a large quantity of toys, sweets and useful household articles were disposed of as prizes for the winners of various games of skill.

The work of the Sisters of the Precious Blood is worthy of recognition.

For the last six years, their convent, hospital and orphanage has been opened to the whole of Kowloon, and the many students, patients and orphans there at present, shows the necessity of such an organisation.

There are fifty Sisters in all, some teaching schools in various parts of Hongkong at their own expense, some in charge of the excellent work in the Convent, and still others doing work of salvation in the interior of China.

The hospital itself requires all the attention and hard work of the Sisters and nurses, as there has been an increase since 1934 both in the number of out-patients and in-patients. The attendance at the out-patient department reached 8,304 in June this year; 5,014 were old patients while 3,290 were new ones. The in-patients treated during 1935 were 1,504. The majority of children admitted for treatment usually suffer from malnutrition as a result of poverty.

The doctors, who deserve great praise for their voluntary work in the Convent's hospital during recent years are Dr. (Mrs.) L. Fehly, Doctors Hops-Gill, M. Nicholson, S. Ajoe, Ho, and A. P. Gutierrez. Dr. H. D. Matthews also gave valuable service while in the Colony.

GOVERNMENT TRADE ESTATES

Various plans have been initiated to bring new life to old industries in Britain, and during the past two years the sum of £5,000,000 has been earmarked for the use of the Special Commissioners. Among the many schemes for districts in which the old industries are not expected appreciably to recover, are some intended to attract new enterprise by the establishment of Trading Estates, and thus establish new means of livelihood
for the unemployed. The first of these estates, which has been organised under the name of the North Trading Estates Company,
has just acquired a site of 700
acres in the Team Valley to the south of Newcastle-on-Tyne, for which the sum of nearly £70,000
has been paid. The development of this scheme will be watched with keen interest, for it is the first time that a group of independent business men have administered State funds provided for the reconstruction of
the Special Areas. The Team Valley being practically virgin soil, the development can proceed unhindered by previous building and road schemes. Here modern factories will be erected round a centre formed by service buildings such as post-office, bank, restaurant, etc. According to the requirements of the industries seeking accommodation, the factories will be provided with cold storage, canteens, club rooms, recreation grounds, etc. The site was chosen with special consideration for its excellent communication by sea, river, road
and rail, and there is plenty of labour available in the surrounding districts. Possible future needs for the housing of a growing population have been catered for, and the assistance of the Royal Institute of Architects will assure that the entire design
and lay-out will conform with the highest standards of beauty and efficiency. Within the next few weeks the construction of two main roads, one from north to south and the other from east to west will be begun, and it is expected that the whole scheme
will be completed early in 1937.
Thirty-five industrial concerns have already made enquiries regarding accommodation at Team Valley, and it is expected that small business men will take the opportunity to avail themselves of the facilities which exist in connection with the reconstruction schemes for the Special Areas to obtain loans to establish themselves in the neighbourhood.
As there is also reason to expect that substantial Government orders connected with the new defence plans will be placed in these new industrial centres, it is hoped that the venture of the Trading Estates will help to exercise the dead hand which has for so long rested on the populations of the Special Areas.

The Queen Goes Home

*It Was at Marlborough House, Built by the Victor of Blenheim, That She Met King George When They Both Were Children, and
There They Lived Before Ascending the Throne*

By ERNEST H. RANN

MARLBOROUGH HOUSE, WHERE QUEEN MARY PLAYED AS A CHILD
With its 200 Rooms it Nevertheless Retains an Atmosphere of Home to Her Majesty
Who Always Found its Five-Acre Garden a Place of Refuge and Now Finds its Memories Sweet as She Makes it Her Home.

QUEEN MARY, as has been expected, has left Buckingham Palace to live in Marlborough House.

It was almost inevitable that
Her Majesty should go there,
for King Edward VIII, has moved across to Buckingham Palace, and his old quarters in St. James's Palace have been taken over by his brother, the Duke of York, heir presumptive
to the Throne.

QUEEN MARY will be in familiar surroundings, and surroundings far more homey, one may say, than Buckingham Palace
across the Mall, in a house full of dear and affectionate memories.

It was here, some 65 years ago,
that she first met the little boy
who was afterward to be her husband—King George. She was 3 years of age, he was 5.

Her mother, the Duchess of Teck, wrote to his mother, the Princess of Wales (Queen Alexandra), asking if she might send
"little Mary, she is now old enough, to play with your Georgie."

They met, they played hide-and-seek among the trees in Marlborough House garden; they began an affectionate friendship which ripened into love.

For nine years, before she came to the Throne, she lived at Marlborough House, and in "moving in" again she is only renewing associations that must be dear and refreshing to her heart.

Her friends say that she has liked Marlborough House, although its 200 rooms—it is the largest royal residence in London, except Buckingham Palace—have made little appeal to one who has always held that a house should be a home.
But its five-acre garden is a haven
of peace, filled with old English flowers such as geraniums, snapdragons and foxgloves, all favourites of the Queen.

ONLY once a year lately has there been any sign of life about the old brick building. This was when the present King, then Prince of Wales, lent the garden
for an annual children's charity fete, and himself stepped across from St. James's Palace, hatless, to join in the fun.

Marlborough House, standing back from the Mall, half-hidden in its wide, spreading garden, is, as has been said, one of the greatest royal residences in London, and it can boast of a life of more than 200 years.

The cost of its upkeep is said to run to £2,000 a week. It has become so closely associated with the British Royal Family that few people think of its origin and its early history connected with its name. If John Churchill had not met Sarah Jennings there might have been no Battle of Blenheim;

and if there had been no Battle of Blenheim there might have been no Marlborough House.

It was the proud, imperious and redoubtable Sarah who secured from Queen Anne the lease of a suitable plot of land on which to build a residence, the terms being so easy that they consisted of nothing more than a ground rent
of 6s. a year.

That grant to the no longer popular Marlborough was a great deal criticised, especially because the work involved the uprooting of an oak sapling grown from a Boscobel acorn planted by King
Charles II, and the lampooners were busy with verses suggesting that the tree should have been allowed to grow until it could serve as a gallows for Duchess Sarah.

Looking round for an architect,
her eye alighted on Sir Christopher Wren (much to the heartburning of Sir John Vanbrugh, who had built Blenheim, and was inclined to forget the squabble he had had
with the Duchess over his fees).
And on a fine warm day in May in 1709 the foundation stone of Marlborough House was laid.

That stone may still be seen in a passage beneath a corridor, bearing the following inscription:

Laid by Her Grace the Duchesse of Marlborough May ye 24)
June ye 4th) 1709

Her Grace was not remarkable for her spelling, but she was advanced enough to anticipate the new reckoning-in-the-calendar—then being discussed, but not put into effect until 1750.

When planned a central block,
with two wings flanking a corridor,
all built of Dutch bricks with stone dressings and balustrades. It greatly impressed Defoe, who wrote: "The palace of the Duke of Marlborough is in every way answerable to the grandeur of its master. . . . Its court is very spacious, and finely paved, the offices are large, and, on each side, as you enter, the stairs mounting to the gate are very noble."

It would be interesting to hear what he would say to the additional stories and rooms, the vita glass, the electric light, the lifts, the hot-water service, the bathrooms, and the motor garage in place of the old stables.

THE cost of the house was between £10,000 and £50,000, which was cheap even in those days, and every penny came out of the Duke's own pocket, at least as the Duchess said. The cost would indeed have been greater if the Duchess, finding that Dutch bricks were decidedly cheaper than English bricks, had not persuaded her husband to have loads of them sent over as ballast in some of the hired transports which were constantly coming and going between England and Holland. Hence the raw material of Sarah's new palace in Pall Mall.

She would have had an entrance worthy of her £50,000 house, and set her heart on buying up and pulling down a number of mean dwellings that stood between the wind and her nobility, but Walpole, who disliked her, heard of the plan, and bought the buildings himself. Thus her hopes of a noble gateway were checked.

THE principal rooms on the ground floor of Marlborough House are now the saloon, the large red drawing room, the small green drawing room, the dining room, and the household dining room. On the floor above are the principal bedrooms. The saloon, formerly the vestibule, is of the full height of the original house, and is lighted through a domed skylight, and the main staircase in the west wing is original, and has the black marble staircase so often trodden by the great Duke and his imperial wife. The east and west walls at gallery level are covered with paintings, as are also the walls of the staircases. The paintings on the walls of the saloon and the staircases are the work of Laguerre, the subject of that in the saloon being the Battle of Blenheim, while others represent Marlborough's other victories. The Dowager Queen Adelaide took a dislike to the pictures and had them hidden behind a sheet of stucco, and they were for a time forgotten, but one who remembered them mentioned their existence to the Prince Consort, and they were afterward uncovered and restored.

THE Duke and the Duchess were
at last gathered to their fathers,
and the long lease to the Marl-boroughs expired in 1817, when the house reverted to the Crown. It was then given to the Princess Charlotte, second heiress to the Throne, and her husband, afterward King Leopold of the Belgians, and the uncle
and mentor of Queen Victoria.

It was the dowry house of Queen
Adelaide, the widow of King William
IV, and when she passed on Lord
John Russell, at the instance of Queen Victoria, brought in a bill appropriating the house to the Prince of Wales (King Edward VII).
Joseph Hume, that arch economist,
was up in arms, and declared that the proposal was premature, since Hampton Court and Kensington
Palace, which were only partially occupied, were at the disposal of the Crown already. However, the bill was carried, and by the most brilliant period in the life of Marlborough House was in the long years between King Edward's marriage
and his accession.

ONE of the most interesting rooms
is the library. It is one in name only. It was a favourite form of Victorian humour to make a display of bogus titles, such as Hood composed for the Duke of Devonshire
at Chatsworth and for Dickens at Gads Hill. Few of these, however,
beat the Marlborough House collection for point and humour, and some may be mentioned as illustration—
Boyle on Steam, Lever on Lifts, Turn Over by Pango, Johnson's Contradictory, Shutters on Draughts, Idols of the King, Lady Godiva on the Horse, Bacon's History of Greece,
Cochin's Lays on China, the Voyage
of Noah by Arkwright, Lochs and Quays of England, Sparke on the Carriatage, and Constable's Notes on Motoring.

Marlborough House was fully prepared for the Prince of Wales (King Edward VII) some years ago, but he would not leave St. James's Palace. There it stands today, with only a few alterations to meet Her Majesty's individual tastes in decoration and furnishing.

PHOTOGRAPHING HARBOUR: CAMERA, FILMS CONFISCATED

"Telegraph" Staff Reporter

A SENSATIONAL RAID BY POLICE OFFICERS UPON THE INSTITUTE OF ENGINEERS' AND SHIPBUILDERS' PREMISES ON THE WATERFRONT ON FRIDAY MORNING CULMINATED IN THE SEIZURE OF A JAPANESE WHO WAS CAUGHT IN THE ACT OF TAKING PHOTOGRAPHS OF HONGKONG HARBOUR.

This startling incident has been brought to light as a result of "Telegraph" inquiries. Retention is being maintained by the local Police authorities regarding the affair.

The incident occurred at 10 a.m. on Friday morning.

The Japanese, who is stated to be a visitor to Hongkong, walked into the Institute premises, which command a fine unobstructed view of the harbour, including the naval dockyards, and commenced taking photographs.

When he arrived the Institute was deserted except for Chinese employees.

Shortly afterwards, however, one of the members, Mr. A. Harper, entered the rooms, and saw the Japanese on the verandah. Mr. Harper immediately telephoned Police Headquarters, and a squad of police quickly arrived on the scene.

The camera was seized and the man was taken to Police Headquarters.

After a statement was taken, he was released. The camera and films, however, were confiscated by the authorities.

Hongkong has been singularly free of spy mania for some years now. It is recalled that several arrests, principally of Japanese, have been made in the past, however.

One such case occurred at Lyemoun Barracks, where a Japanese was arrested on the hillside in the vicinity of the Forts. In his possession was discovered complete sketches of the fortifications which, just before his arrest, he had unsuccessfully attempted to tear up.

The use of cameras, even by British subjects, is strictly restricted in Hongkong.

£70,000 WAITING FOR 10 WOMEN TO CLAIM

NEARLY £70,000 is to be divided among ten women—the whereabouts of whom remains a mystery—under the will, published in London last month of Miss Eva Sanger, of Doughty-street, Bloomsbury, who lived alone, except for a legion of cats, and was always believed to be impoverished.

Miss Sanger, who died on June 20, left £94,856, with net personalty £92,651. Estate duty amounts to £17,691. The will, dated November 1927, has been proved by Mr. Richard Stapleton Taylor, of Field-court, Gray's-inn, W.C.

She left a year's wages to her woman servant, Mary Turner, if still in her service, annuities of £20 each to her cook, Annie Willis, and Theresa Uimer, former cook, and £200 to St. Mark's Hospital for Fistula.

The rest of her fortune is divided between:

Ada Lockett,
Mary Ann Golding Bird, Lucilla Maxwell,
Emily Jane Matthews,
Julia Catherine North, Minnie Blanche Gilbert, and Marian Skinner.

The share of Ada Lockett and Mary Ann Golding Bird is £1,000 each; the remainder share the residue.

HER LOCKED HOUSE

For more than nine years Miss Sanger, a shabby, secretive old woman, had lived with her cats in a ten-roomed house in Doughty-street. Last month the house was still shut up, the windows thick with grime, the rooms filled with old-fashioned but expensive furniture heavily powdered with dust, awaiting the appearance of the legatees.

But who they are is as yet as deep a mystery as was the wealthy old recluse herself, for as long as her neighbours can remember she had lived alone and unresponsive to every friendly approach.

The proprietress of a boarding house a few doors away said: "She was an object of curiosity for many years. Always dressed in an old and rather bedraggled tweed coat reaching almost to her feet, and with a shapeless old hat on her head, she visited the same little restaurant every day for luncheon, on which she never spent more than a shilling or so."

"I believe that when she first came to Doughty-street to live, with a cousin she ran her household on a good scale with a number of servants. But after the death of her cousin, she began to shun companionship. The maids went, and she began to go about in a secretive way which made people think she had lost all her money."

ATSUTA MARU IN CENTRE OF TYPHOON

PASSENGERS LOCKED IN CABINS

Extraordinarily rough weather was experienced by the N.Y.K. liner Atsuta Maru whilst en route from Hongkong to Manila last week, according to advices just received from the Philippines capital.

The Atsuta Maru, en route to Australian ports, encountered the full force of the typhoon reported by Manila Observatory early last week.

Passengers, it is stated, were locked in their cabins owing to the heavy seas that continuously swept the decks of the ship.

WINTER SOCIAL SEASON KICKS OFF WITH TWO BIG SUCCESSES

HONGKONG can thank its lucky stars for one thing: Bob and Bert Hellman, latest additions to the Colony's bunch of professional musical artists don't work under Trade Union rules. They played on two pianos for five hours without a break at the Hongkong Hotel Roof Garden on Saturday, the most brilliant dual pianoforte achievement ever accomplished in Hongkong.

One trembles to think what the T.U.C. would say, but nobody cared on Saturday (least of all Bob and Bert) for to nearly 300 people it meant five hours of splendid entertainment.

As usual the Hongkong Hotel's contribution to the ushering-in of the Colony's social season was magnificent. The Roof Garden, freshly adorned with a new decorative motif, and proudly showing off its new and artistic orchestral staff, presented a charming spectacle, and went a long way towards creating the type of atmosphere so essential to the success of such a gala night.

The guests continued until the early hours, but very few were ready to leave when the time came. Hongkong Hotel has never had a more successful opening of a winter season, and for this considerable credit is due to the management for its ideal arrangements. It was, in many respects, an unforgettable event.

REVELRY AT GLOUCESTER

Scenes of revelry reminiscent of pre-depression days were witnessed at the Gloucester Hotel's new ballroom, which was opened for the first time on Saturday night.

This new social rendezvous was crowded to utmost capacity, full bookings being assured almost a week before the event took place.

The Management spared no expense in making the function a memorable one from a social point of view.

Novelties, not the least of which was the new Cosack Orchestra specially imported from Shanghai, quickly put the huge crowd in a happy frame of mind.

Cabaret entertainment, provided by the famous "Queenie", Kall's Hawaiian Troubadours, and Nina and Jose, was of an extraordinarily high order.

The unusual boisterous nature of the happy crowd at the Gloucester forced every artist to give three, four and even five encores of each of their numbers.

The adjective "beautiful" applied in advertisements to "Queenie's" Hula dancers Miami, Mary and Millie, was no misnomer, and they quickly established themselves as the hottest favourites with the crowds.

Dancing by Nina and Jose, recently arrived from Mexico, was of a breath-taking nature, and their interpretations of acrobatic Latin dances have never been excelled in this Colony.

Among the guests at the Gloucester on Saturday night was Miss Anna May Wong, the Hollywood film star. The Management of the Gloucester announces repeat Galas for Wednesday and Saturday nights this week.

"Dead" Son Now Radio Announcer

BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN KILLED AT MONS

A Glasgow woman, 18 years after the Armistice, has received news that her only son, John Alrd, who was believed to have been killed in France during the War, is alive and well in Canada.

She is Mrs. Helen Tweedie (she has been married twice), and is now 67. Her son, then a boy in his teens, went to Canada 25 years ago, and on the outbreak of War joined up with the Canadian forces. She received the report of his death from a friend who fought by his side.

Now the "dead" man has succeeded in tracing his mother. She was an inmate of a Glasgow hospital when the news came from her son.

His letter ran, "I am pleased after all these years of absence to get in touch with you again. I am married, with a large family, and I am a radio announcer. Please give me all the information about yourself."

Mrs. Tweedie is replying fully.

TRAGEDY MARS VOYAGE FROM HONGKONG

WOMAN PASSENGER LOST ON STEAMER TANDA

Tragedy marred the voyage of the E. & A. liner Tanda from Hongkong to Australia last month, according to advices just received from Sydney.

One of the Hongkong passengers aboard the ship, a Miss McCray, is believed to have committed suicide just as the ship left Sydney for Melbourne.

Moore details disclose that Miss McCray went aboard the Tanda at Sydney just before it sailed.

Her body was picked up next morning by a Water Police launch in Watson's Bay, near Sydney.

Tilden And Vines May Play Four Times In Hongkong

FAR EAST ZONE OF DAVIS CUP SCHEME OPPOSED BY CHINA AND JAPAN

"BIG BILL" Tilden, Ellsworth Vines and Miss Jane Sharp, three famous professional tennis players, who, as the Americans so piously put it, are "representing the Orient," arrive in Yokohama to-day and receive their first glimpse of the Far East. On November 2 they sail from Kobe, and seven days later they will be in Hongkong. Thus, at long last we have definite news about our illustrious visitors. The exclusive Telegraph announcement on Saturday that Tilden and Co. will not only be coming to Hongkong, but are prepared to play tennis here, aroused widespread interest. That announcement can now be amplified. If the President Lincoln, by which the tennis Aces will be travelling from Kobe to Manila, keeps strictly to schedule, our visitors will arrive here early in the morning of November 9, and will sail again the following night. This means Tilden and his colleagues will be in the Colony for nearly 48 hours, sufficiently long, anyhow, for them to make two appearances on the tennis court. Then they will continue their journey to Manila, stay over for couple of days and be back in Hongkong again in the early hours of November 16. The ship will remain in port two complete days, which will enable the players to give further exhibitions.

Financial Side Not

Likely To Worry

BRIEFLY then Hongkong has every hope of seeing Tilden, Vines and Miss Sharp in action during four days, and I can state, unofficially, though quite definitely, that the Hongkong L.T.A. is going to strenuous efforts to make full use of these four opportunities. Of course the fact that the professionals have expressed their willingness to play does not finalise the matter. There is a tremendous amount of work to be done and quite a few obstacles to overcome. Tilden has indicated the financial terms under which they will play, and although I cannot make them known here, I can say that they are reasonable, and I should imagine, very acceptable to the Hongkong L.T.A. It is a downright offer of the type which will allow our organisers to make a fairly sound estimate of the likely results. So far as the financial side of the matter is concerned, there seems to be no reason for worry.

The Bigger Question

THE bigger question concerns the arrangement of matches. Three professionals are visiting us, including one lady. According to Vines they are prepared to play with and against Colony talent. But that is out of the question. In granting permission for the Association to stage these exhibitions, the English L.T.A. emphasised that no local amateur player must participate. This point was given additional urgency in a letter from Mr. Justice Lindell, President of the H.K.L.T.A., who personally interviewed Mr. H. A. Sabelli, Secretary of the English L.T.A. in London last month. Under no consideration said Mr. Sabelli must a Hongkong amateur tennis player take part in any exhibition matches by professionals. Well, we have no professional players here, so that leaves us with our three visitors. Of course, we all want to see Tilden and Vines in a singles, but we also want to see Miss Sharp in action, and experience goes to show that the public find more entertainment in doubles, than singles play. So we also want to see doubles. The point which, I believe, the L.T.A. is going to consider is whether they will invite Francisco Aragon, the Manila professional, to come here to make up a foursome. It is about the only alternative if doubles matches are to be included in the programme. And the success even of that move is speculative, for it would mean Miss Sharp pairing off with one of the men against the other two. Not that one doubts Miss Sharp's ability to hold her own in such company. It's just that it is unusual. On the other hand it will be novel, and novelty is the soul of good entertainment. But these, and other details, such as venue and proper accommodation, must be left to the L.T.A. At least the occasion is worth a little hard work and even a bit of inconvenience if necessary. I am sure it will be well advised to bear in mind, that Hongkong is dead keen on seeing Messrs. Tilden and Vines, and that it will be vastly disappointed if arrangements to this end cannot be satisfactorily concluded.

Far East And The

Davis Cup

I am afraid the formation of a new zone of the Davis Cup competition in the Far East is a dead letter. This idea, which emanated from Australia, and which Mr. Norman Brookes has been canvassing in the course of his world travels during the past three years, sustained a nasty rebuff at a recent meeting of the Council of the Davis Cup Nations. The committee's report on the suggestion was fully discussed, and eventually it was decided to refer the whole matter back for further consideration. And this after China, Japan and India had emphatically spoken against the formation of such a zone. Colonel B. O. Roe, representing India, made the rather surprising statement that so far as he was aware, none of the interested countries such as the Netherlands East Indies, China, Japan, India, Siam, Malaya, the Philippines and Kenya had been approached to ascertain whether they desired such a zone. I say that this is surprising, because when Mr. Norman Brookes came to Hongkong three years ago on his mission of goodwill he talked freely into this Pacific Zone idea and, if memory serves correctly, stated that he intended to lay the proposition twice before the various national executives in the Pacific. Perhaps Col. Roe was misinformed.

Main Bone of Contention

THE main bone of contention by India, China and Japan was that the creation of a Far Eastern zone would entail too much travelling. Which at first glance appears to be a most ridiculous suggestion. But Col. Roe revealed that it was not so preposterous as it sounds. If India, for example, produced a good enough team, it was possible that by competing in a Pacific Zone they might have to play their first match at Honolulu, the next in Yokohama, the next in Nairobi and the next in Australia. And all of this would have to be accomplished before February 1 and June 20. He thought it would be impossible to carry out such a programme. Mr. S. Miyaguchi and Mr. W. Z. L. Sung, representing Japan and China respectively, thought the same way, and said so in no uncertain tones. Only the Dutch East Indies, besides Australia, gave any indication of a desire to participate in a Far Eastern zone, but finally, on the opposition of Great Britain, the matter was referred back to the committee for them to ascertain the views of the interested countries as to whether they favoured the division of the present American zone into two groups—a Pacific group and an American group, with these two groups to be again sub-divided into two sections each, a North and South American and a North and South Pacific section; and whether the winner of the South Pacific section should play the winner of the South American section and the same with the northern section of the two groups, with the ultimate winners meeting in an Inter-Group final. The necessity of such a system was made clear when it was pointed out that if the Pacific group was a Zone, it would change the whole complexion of the Inter-Zone final which is now played a week before the Challenge Round. It would entail three nations being left, and one would have to draw a bye. This, it was agreed, would be totally unsatisfactory.

Football Match With A Moral

KEEP YOUR HANDS TO YOURSELF

(By "Veritas")

Recreio 1 Joseph's 1

It is no good trying to disguise the fact that this was a disappointing match. There was no reason why it should have been, unless it was that the Gosano brothers, who are sufficiently entertaining to make any game attractive, were absent.

This particular fact, anyhow, makes Recreio's division of the spoils all the more creditable. Most of the onlookers probably considered St. Joseph's unfairly treated by the result, and if one were to judge a match purely from the point of territorial advantages, the claim would be justified.

But the truth is the Saints were no more, if as much, a little better than bad. St. Joseph's invasions were certainly of greater duration, but the confusion which existed between the inside forwards completely set this at naught.

RIGHT WING FAILS

Perhaps the biggest disappointment was the work of the Delgado-Castillo wing. Something went radically wrong with these two players. They were positively flustered by the number of times the ball was directed to them by Castro, Omar and Leonard, which made it all the more sad when they flattered away rare opportunities.

Possibly the smallness of the ground had something to do with the comparative ineptitude of the Saints' forward line. Anyway they always appeared to be crowding each other, and one waited in vain for a movement which comprised long swinging passes. It was all this sort of short-daily-cutting type of passing which was well and good for three parts of the field, but came to nothing against resolute backs who cut out the fancy stuff and just waded in with first-time kicking.

Furthermore it gave the Recreio defenders lots of time in which to position themselves.

Certainly so far as tactics were concerned St. Joseph's failed badly.

SINGLE-HANDED ATTACK

Neither did Recreio as a team contribute anything to the open type of game. It was left to Gomes, diminutive inside left to exploit this form of attack. Gomes played a single-handed game in brilliant fashion. It struck me that if Recreio had backed another Gomes in the forward line, St. Joseph's would never have got away with a point.

I thought Recreio deserved their point because, apart from the wretchedness of the opposition, for—

Mrs. Krenov To Play In Final Championship

A Shanghai tennis champion may be included in the Country Club team which is visiting Hongkong at the end of this week to participate in a series of matches with local teams.

Mrs. B. Krenov (formerly Miss Billie Firth), who is one of the visiting lady players, to-morrow figures in the final of the Shanghai Lawn Tennis Association ladies' singles championship. She opposes Miss C. Tavares.

Mrs. Krenov is a former Shanghai champion and is favoured to win back the title. If she does so, Hongkong L.T.A. might find it worth while to match her and Mrs. Nora Wilson, the present Colony champion, in an exhibition singles. They have never met before, as Mrs. Krenov did not participate in last year's Interport. Mrs. Wilson playing Mrs. Moir in that event and winning 6-0, 2-6, 6-1.

POLICE IN DOLDRUMS: FUSILIERS UPSET: CLUB AGAIN

R. U. RIFLES GIVE PERFECT DISPLAY KOWLOON'S BIG IMPROVEMENT

TWENTY-EIGHT teams scored 80 goals between them in Hongkong league football during the week-end, while as a result of the programme, only eight teams in the three divisions now boast the full complement of points from matches played. Hongkong F.C. in the first division, Royal Engineers in the second and R.A.F. in the third are the only three teams which have not conceded a goal. Club and Sappers have each played two games, the former scoring 12 goals and the soldiers eight, while the Air Force have played but one match in which they scored a single goal. Below will be found impressions of some of the more important games played on Saturday.

ALREADY the question is being asked: "Who is capable of stopping the Club?" Twelve goals in two matches, and a clean sheet on the "against" side of the balance sheet! Unless it is one of the biggest deceptions known to local football, it means only one thing: Club are going to be among the leading contestants for the championship. The way they overwhelmed Eastern Athletic on Saturday, scoring seven times without reply, convinced one that "South China" "A" will have to play up to their European standard if they are to avert defeat against the Club. And even that is no guarantee.

PHILOSOPHICAL PARAGRAPH

If one had philosophical tendencies, one could not avoid pondering on the remarkable effect to be gained by a team which makes one or two experimental positional changes, and introduces to a forward line a couple of fast-thinking, able-footed players. Certain things about the Club team stand out a mile as a result of Saturday's match. (a) That Drown and E. Strange are two of the best wing halves the team has ever boasted; (b) that the inclusion of Fleming and Wilson in the attack has improved that section of the team out of all knowledge. Club can now be said to be rich, not only in individual talent, but in team spirit, and such a combination usually produces success and lots of league points.

BEAMING AND KNITTED BROWS

AND while the Club are beaming with delight, Police are knitting their brows in anxious bewilderment. Five-nil licking the week before can, perhaps, be explained away by the fact that it was the first match of the season. But when it is followed up with a 6-1 whacking on Saturday—and that with a reorganised team—then there is no wonder Police have a slightly jaundiced outlook on things. It seems I spoke a bit out of turn last Saturday when I confidently predicted Police would come into their own as a result of vital team changes. They were no match for the Royal Ulster Rifles machinery. Frustrated and outclassed by a perfect combination just about sums up their debacle. And in view of the score it seems foolishly contradictory to claim that the best feature of the Police was their defence. Yet this was so. McHardy, Blackburn and Parker worked like galley slaves, but they were left helpless and bewildered by the meticulous accuracy and brilliance of the Rifles' attack. On the other hand none of the half backs settled down to anything like a sound display. Gough is still endeavouring to find his feet, and moved so heavily that Campbell, Ferguson and Doherty were able to weave patterns around him.

RIFLES IN HAPPY MOOD

AS for the Rifles, it falls to their happy lot to be able to claim having given one of the finest exhibitions of football seen in the Colony for a long while. So faultless were they in combination that one was reminded instinctively of an American football team which learns its playing codes off by heart and makes play accordingly with mathematical precision. Scarcely a pass was wasted, whether it be made by a half back or forward. Players ran into correct positions like well-trained professionals, and a moving move appeared to have been based on a theory which had been thrashed out and thoroughly assimilated in the dressing room. Ferguson's leadership of the attack was one of the best things seen on the Railway ground for years, while the goal-scoring propensities of Hartigan on the right-wing were definitely the outstanding feature of an outstanding match. Hartigan claimed three of the six goals, probably the best day's work he has ever accomplished on the football field—at least in senior grade.

REJUVENATED KOWLOON

IF I went astray regarding my ideas of the Police, Kowloon came along to console with a well-earned draw against South China "B". Their team shuffling was almost completely vindicated. One very happy feature was the vast improvement noted in defence. Bowen and Eastman offered a very bold and sturdy front to the painstaking Chinese quintette. Both not in quick tactics and spectacular first-time clearances. This is the only way to subdue the nippy and pattern-weaving Chinese as has been demonstrated times without number. Mills made quite a useful debut at left half, while Bliss was always prominent. There was an atmosphere of rejuvenation about the Kowloon team which must have gladdened the hearts of their supporters. Incidentally to V. White goes the bouquet for scoring the most spectacular goal of the season to date. It was the outcome of some very quick thinking and equally as fast action. Honnibal sent across a pass which could neither be headed nor kicked directly into the goal. So White got it down to the ground with his head and then shot on the half-volley. The ball went into the net like a bullet.

BOUQUET FOR EAST LANCES

THAT'S one bouquet. The other goes to East Lancashire for serving up the biggest surprise of the day. They bent that splendid Royal Welch Fusiliers team by two clear goals after a match palpitating with excitement and full of fine action. This was a match in which both teams gave rousing displays of football. Fusiliers were by no means out-matched, but their forwards were a bit slow in accepting chances, so that although on a balance of play, the Royal Welch shared the honours, the East Lances got the goals and the points. Winners surprised with their revival. It was nothing like the same team which gave such a lethargic performance a week before. Team changes apparently worked the miracle. Corwoy everybody was on his mettle, and it was pleasing to see Sandford recapture his form. All the same Smith, East Lances' inside right was the man of the match. This go-ahead young man led Wheeler and Kenting a merry dance, and but for some timely work by the latter Smith would have scored more than once. As it was his goal resulted from a fine piece of enterprise. At the other end of the field Swain and Steele were at their best—cool, calculating and immovable.

FUSILIERS BIG WEAKNESS

FUSILIERS revealed one weakness which will cause the defeat of the best of teams. The forwards could not finish. In all other phases they were equal to their opponents, but some of the attempts to score goals were not successful. This was solely the cause of their defeat. Parry on the right wing, alone showed any real idea of where the goal was situated, but he wasn't blessed with too much luck. Talbot was again extremely clever in approach play, although he became a trifle obvious when in the penalty area and had his earlier work quickly destroyed by the alert Swain and Steele. Cresty was methodical but lacked imagination at centre-half. He played so strictly to the "book" that most of his efforts could be anticipated.

ATHLETIC PAST V. PRESENT

RESULT WAS A DRAW

MAK SUI-HON'S RETURN

Kowloon Chinese. 1 Athletic. 1 (in Fingering) (Lai Wa-pai)

Kowloon Chinese and Chinese Athletic had the comparatively unusual experience of playing their first divisional match yesterday on a rain-drenched ground and under conditions which did not encourage high-class football.

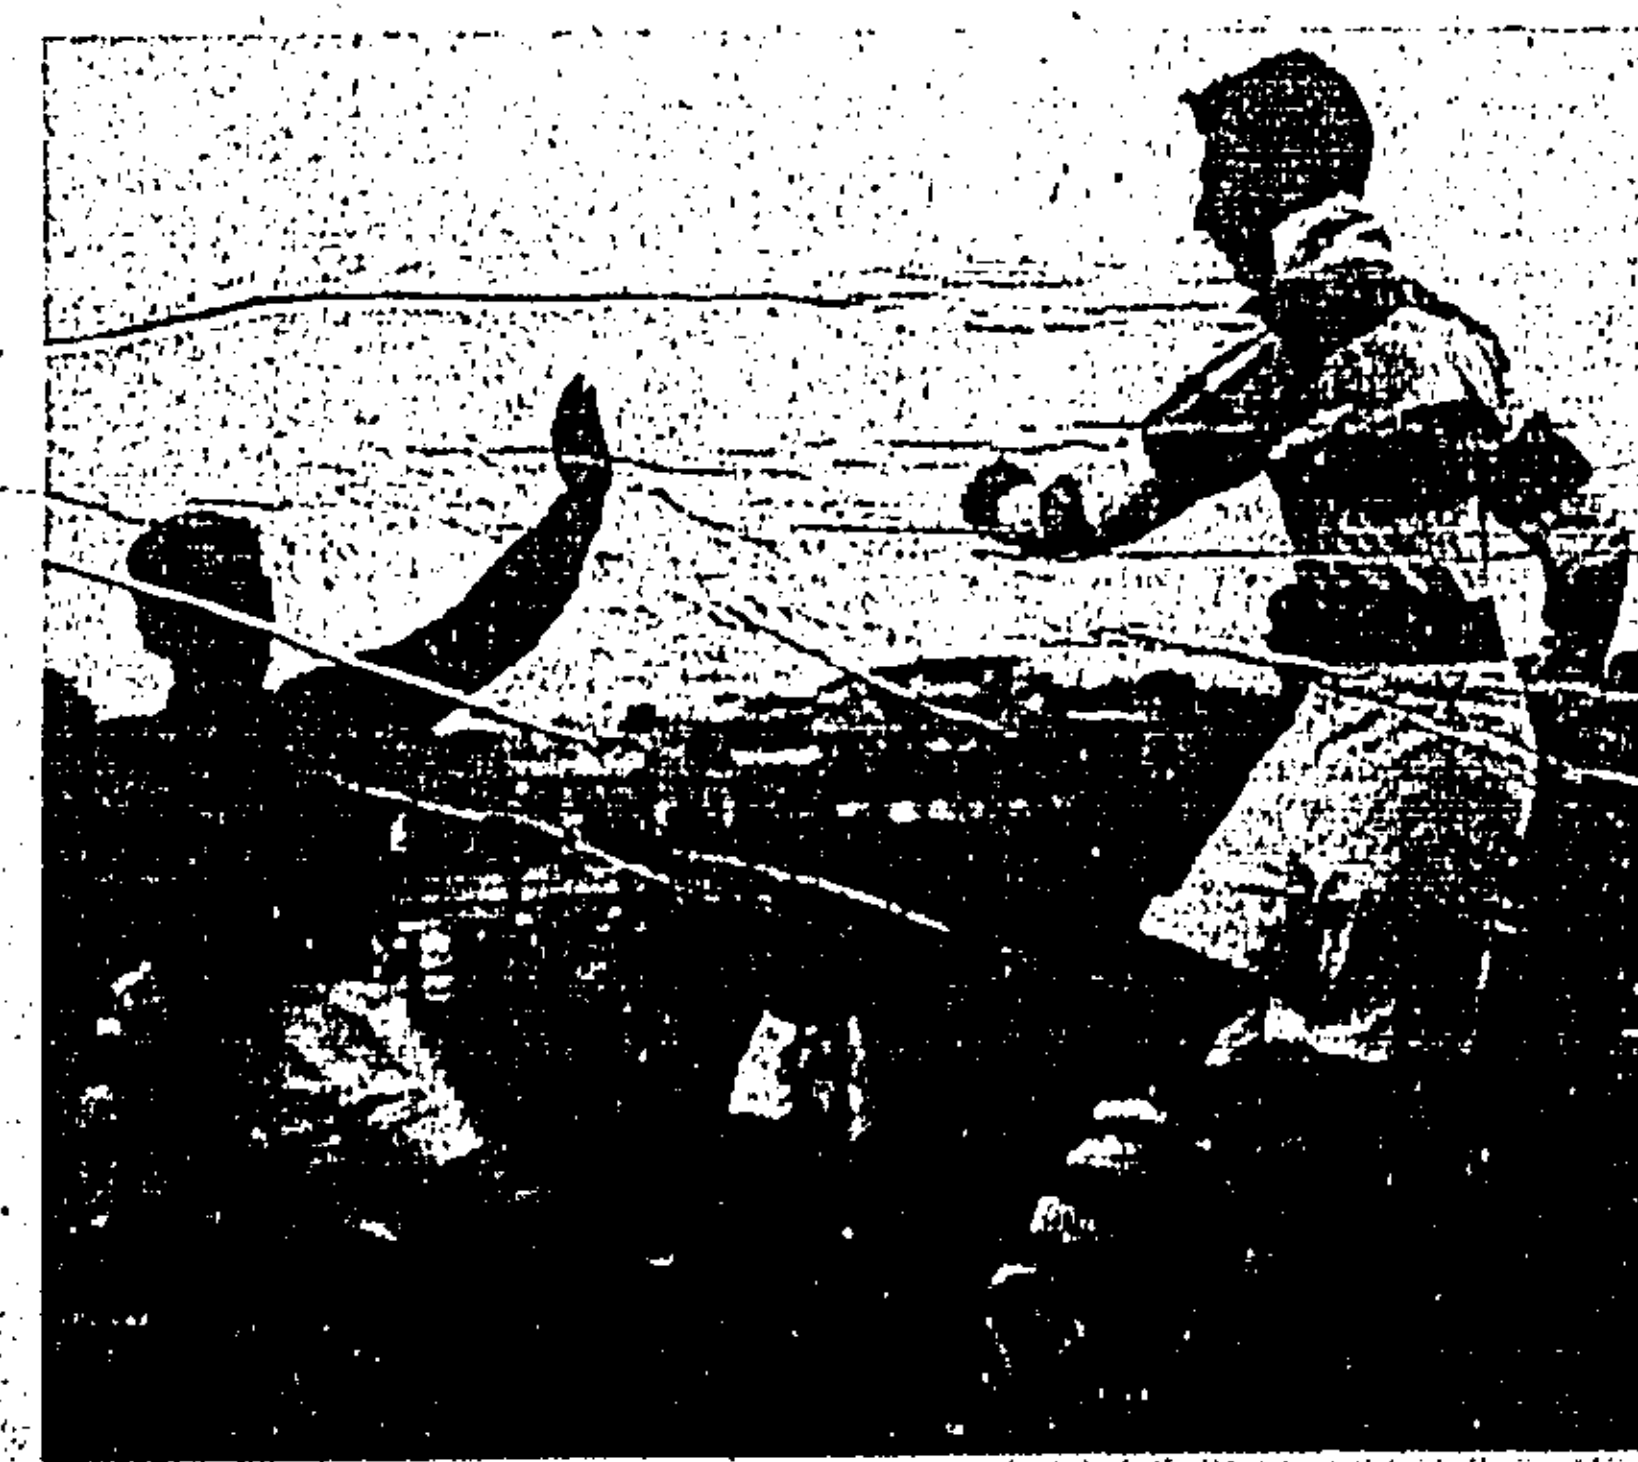

Nevertheless both teams contrived to overcome these difficulties and succeeded in a marked degree, the match ending in a draw of one goal each, being featured by some excellent play.

Additional colour was lent to the game in so far that eight or nine of the Kowloon Chinese team were ex-Athletic players, while no little interest was evinced in the first appearance to the World Olympics of Mak Sui-hon, former Athletic right back.

Both teams kept the ball moving quickly and the exchanges were extremely fast and entertaining. Athletic forwards were more accurate in their shooting and this encouraged Wong Cheung to give a brilliant display between the sticks. Kowloon Chinese attack was somewhat thrown out of order by the failure of Au Ping-ming to make use of several fine openings.

Chow Mark and Yeung Kan-po were go-ahead forwards, but Tung Kwong-sum could not properly overcome the slippery underfoot conditions and was below form. Lai Kow-chui played a skilful game at centre-half.

Athletic were best served by Cheung Ying-kuen in the pivotal berth, while Lim Tak-lee was the outstanding forward and caused considerable anxiety to Mak Sui-hon and his co-defenders. Actually none of the players was very much below par and with both teams playing typically artistic Chinese football, the match was completely entertaining. Athletic took the lead after an evenly contested first half, but there was an element of luck about it; Lai Wa-gai mistaking with the result that Wong Cheung, who had shaped for an entirely different kind of shot, was taken by surprise. Within a couple of minutes Kowloon Chinese were on level terms, Au Ping-ming putting the finishing touches to a right wing movement.

MORE SHANGHAI PLAYERS TO GIVE BADMINTON EXHIBITIONS

(By "Veritas")

NOT only will A. G. Meise and Mrs. T. M. Burton, ex-Shanghai mixed doubles badminton champions, take part in exhibitions of badminton at Club de Recreio to-morrow week, but Mr. J. G. Forbes and Miss Joan Massey, first league players, who are with the Shanghai Country Club tennis team visiting the Colony this week, have expressed a desire to appear.

Accordingly the programme, outlined in the Telegraph last Friday, will be amended, and a second mixed doubles match included. This will be between Forbes and Miss Massey and a selected Colony pair.

Players who have been nominated for mixed doubles trials are asked to note that these trials will be held at the Club de Recreio on Thursday evening of this week, and not Friday as originally arranged. This is due to the fact that the Recreio players are due to travel to Macao on Friday to participate in a Double-Tenth sports programme against local Portuguese teams.

words, the defence played a courageous game. There wasn't much finesse about it, but it served its purpose nobly. Alves, playing in place of A. V. Gosano, and Silva played tremendously and his inside and crowded Leonard and his inside men so successfully, that they were able to relieve any sort of threatening situation.

Determination was the keynote of the Recreo defence, and it earned its reward. It was interesting to see Beltrao figuring in the forward line, though for the most part he played as a half back, and incidentally was instrumental in keeping a thorough check on Ward. Nevertheless he might have kept up with his colleagues to some material advantage. More than once the ball went astray because it was passed into an empty space which he should have been filling.

What it meant was that the majority of the Recreo attacks had to be developed by the left wing. Alves and Gomes did their best, though Alves experienced trouble in controlling the ball on a fast ground. Gomes was the only vanner to cause any anxiety to Sousa and Costa.

SOUSA AND COSTA

And here it is well to mention the sterling performances of these two players. Their intelligent play did much to lift the game out of the ruck of sheer mediocrity. Costa's anticipation, strong tackling and hefty clearances were good to behold, and when he surged up to be among his forwards, it was Sousa who remained behind and held the fort with unerring judgment and skill.

I liked too the work of Omar at right half. This player is certainly an asset to the team, and he came out of a fairly gruelling test with honours. Elms was very self-possessed and efficient at left half.

I have already written generally about the forward line. Leonard displayed the most initiative, but a good deal of his labours were spoilt by Delgado, who was painfully slow in ball manipulation. Ward, like Beltrao, played too far back to be of any real help as an attacker, and Fernandez was never able to outwit Alves.

A MORAL

The match, however, provided one with a moral. It is never handle a ball deliberately because it has been your. Leonard did so and the penalty was an equalising goal for the Recreo. I am certain that in a straight-forward drive on the Saints' goal, Recreo would never have scored. But Leonard, because he could not accept a pass to Alves on the left wing, deliberately handled the ball and gave Alves his one big chance. The young left-winger took it without hesitation, planting the ball into the net with a perfectly angled drop shot from 25 yards.

This was the first of a series of goals. Before this Leonard had given the Saints a lead, but it was not a good goal and I thought that if Morques had dived for the ball instead of trying to kick it away, he would have saved the shot.

In the first half Gomes had exceptionally bad luck with a magnificent shot which struck the cross-bar with the goalkeeper well beaten, while early in the second half, which was signalled with a blank score sheet, Ward made two shocking mistakes, twice ballooning the ball over from ideal positions.

I am convinced that both teams can play very much better than they did in this match. But Recreo clearly need some strengthening influence such as the Gosano brothers, while St. Joseph's might find it worth their while to eschew the close-passing game, and concentrate on moving the ball quickly from wing to wing.

Englishwoman Tells Of Penalties Of Life Abroad.

"I have travelled over the greater part of the world," stated Mrs. M. Crowden, now residing at 40, Broad Oak-road, St. Helens, to a newspaper reporter. "My husband is a trainer of racehorses, and he has controlled stables on the Continent, in New Zealand, Australia and India."

"I was living in India for three years, and while there I contracted malarial fever, and for a while my life was despaired of. Although I recovered somewhat, the tropical climate was too much for me and I had to leave my husband and return to England."

"After my return, however, I was subject to recurring attacks of the malarin and I dreaded the approach of symptoms foretelling an attack. I suffered from chills, my appetite went completely and the very sight of food was distasteful to me. This went on until I became almost a complete mental and physical wreck, and didn't even wish to live."

"Then one day a booklet came into my hands describing how many sufferers from debility and other ailments had been cured by Dr. Williams' pink pills, and I determined to give the pills a trial."

"Before I had finished the first box, I felt that the pills were doing me good. I continued, and benefit was gradual and certain. I regained my strength, and I could eat my food and enjoy it. By the time I had taken five boxes of Dr. Williams' pink pills, my health was completely restored. Now I feel stronger than I have done for years, and am able to enjoy life again. I cannot say how grateful I am to Dr. Williams' pink pills, and I shall recommend them without hesitation."

Dr. Williams' pink pills are equally good for both sexes and have proved a priceless boon to thousands of run-down, nervous men and women because they actually create rich blood which gives new life and energy to the whole system. Owing to climatic conditions Dr. Williams' pink pills are packed in hermetically sealed glass containers for sale in the Far East. From chemists everywhere.

MOTOR SHOW —Pre-View

AFTER my busman's holiday, mountain-motoring in the Alps, I return to find a great number of new models awaiting my inspection.

A fine lot of cars they are, too. After seeing (and riding in) a good many foreign machines, it is good to realise again that Britain is still on top when it comes to sane and honest automobile production.

Nearly all the secrets are out now. Though, long before the curtain goes up at Olympia on Thursday, October 15, we shall have seen and tried many of the new models, the Motor Show will not be a whit the less interesting for that.

This year the motor industry wisely decided against change for change's sake alone. Manufacturers like Morris, Wolseley, Rolls-Royce, Bentley and some others found that the range of well-tested and popular cars already on the market needed no improvement, and so continued the range with little, if any, modification.

Few Big Changes

There is little important change as regards design. Coachwork is more graceful (and standardised) and of today is the equal to the specialised and expensive coachwork of two years ago; and attention has been paid to the need for proper covered-in luggage accommodation.

The Riley concern, I am glad to see, have reintroduced the famous "Nine" Monaco saloon, a car that was probably the most popular of all the low-powered medium-sized machines.

With many improvements, including six-light coachwork and attractive appearance, and the famous twin-carburettor four-cylinder 9-h.p. engine, self-changing gear-box, and automatic clutch, a box-section frame and Cirling brakes, the new model is to sell at the price of the forerunner, £208. A very wise move, Mr. Riley.

Then the greatly improved 11-litre Falcon saloon, with better-looking coachwork, has been reduced in price to £215.

The "Merlin" Nine is increased in price from £205 to £215. The other models remain unchanged.

Then there are the new S.S. "Jaguars." These fine-looking cars have been improved by engine modifications, which have resulted in quieter and smoother running; larger brakes have been fitted; the upholstery is now of Dunlopillo.

P-100 headlamps are fitted, and the side-lights have been revised neatly into the bigger 3-litre six-cylinder engine. The bigger 3-litre six-cylinder engine, which could provide you with a better-looking car.

I am told that the cost of these extra fittings, at retail prices, is between £40 and £50; the price of the 24-litre remains unchanged at £385, and the 11-litre is up £10 to £235.

The secret is that the firm hopes to sell twice as many cars in 1937 as it did in 1936, and the profit has accordingly been reduced.

On my way to Ireland for the "T.T." race, I had a run in one of the 24-litre saloons, and a very pleasant motor-car it is. Congratulations, Mr. Lyons.

The Alvis programme consists of four new cars, the most noteworthy being the "Speed 25," which takes the place of the justly famous "Speed Twenty." Most important feature is the bigger 3-litre six-cylinder engine.

There is a new 41-litre model, and the other models are the "Orested Eagle 20 h.p." and the "Twenty-Five." The "Speed 25" four-seater sports model costs £400, and the most expensive car is the 43-litre saloon at £595.

Rover models for 1937 consist of 10 h.p., 12 h.p., 14 h.p., 16 h.p., and a "speed" model.

All models retain the free-wheel, coachwork dimensions have been increased, and the 10 h.p. saloon has been improved in rear appearance.

The "speed" model is similar to the 16 h.p., which is an addition to the range, but is fitted with a 20 h.p. engine.

First out with news of what they will actually show at Olympia, the Morris concern is to have eight cars on the stand—three "eights," a "ten" saloon, a "twelve" coupé, fourteen "saloon," "eighteen" coupé, and "twenty-five" saloon, a representative

by Thomas H. WISDOM

selection of the Morris range of 25 body and chassis types.

Another new model of interest is the new Lanchester "14," a new car incorporating the well-known Daimler fluid-flywheel and pre-selective gear-box, and is the lowest-priced six-cylinder car to be marketed by the Lanchester concern; it costs £225.

Finally, there is a most important new model which will not be at the Motor Show, but at Olympia's rival, the Ford Show, at the Albert Hall, particulars of which will be found on another page.

The new Ford, which I saw on the Continent, is startling as regards both performance and price.

Those are all the new cars. There are one or two yet to come before the Motor Show opens. We have yet to hear publicly announced the new Autovian, the V-8 engine luxury car which has been built in the Riley factory.

Then, as I am told, the Sunbeam factory has a surprise for us. Let it be remembered that this famous firm, in the old days, produced some of the leading cars. They are making a "come-back" after a period of acute depression.

Yes, there will be lots that is new to see at Olympia.

ROUND ABOUT by The Showman

THERE has been a lot of shouting about a film called "Mary of Scotland" (incidentally, some great mind must have thought this a better title than "Mary, Queen of Scots"), and I remember a similar fuss about another historical film called "Christina of Sweden."

Note, please, that I have used the word "historical."

Now, I want you to do me a favour. I want you to accompany me into the year 2020—a hundred years hence. Hollywood is still producing historical films, and its latest is "The Old School Tie," with Mr. Stanley Baldwin as hero.

Old School Tie

HISTORICAL drama reaches dizzy heights in "The Old School Tie" when, during the Italian-Abyssinian war, Mussolini and the Emperor Haile Selassie make secret journeys to London—Mussolini to see Mr. Baldwin, the Emperor to see Mr. Eden.

Mr. Baldwin, as an old Harrovian, is deeply moved to learn that Mussolini also went to Harrow, and promises him his support.

Eden, as an old Harrovian, is deeply moved to learn that the Emperor also went to Harrow, and promises him his support.

"We must drop Sanctional!" says Baldwin to Eden. There must be war," says Eden to Baldwin. Baldwin has an inspiration and says to Eden, "old man, the Eden and Harrow match shall decide!" And Eden says to Baldwin, "Old man, that's O.K. by me!"

What a fever of excitement there is when the Duchess of Atholl, bowling for Harrow, takes six wickets with six balls and wins for the School and the Duke!

Grand Entertainment

THE critics admitted that there were some historical inaccuracies. "Neither the Emperor nor Mussolini," said one, "ever went to an English public school, and the Duchess of Atholl could not have been an Harrovian as Harrow did not become a co-educational establishment, admitting boys and girls, until 1924. Even so, it is doubtful that an Old Girl would have been allowed to bowl in the early 20th century atmosphere, and knotted to a magnificent climax."

Harold Hengist, the giant "Blond" of the film, had the chance of this screen career as Mr. Baldwin, and made the most of it.

WAR DE LUXE

THE chattering about the Spanish civil war are excellent themselves. One, in the midst of a hotel talk of casualties among acquaintances in the fighting, and proceeds—

"And one hears that the Duke of Alba's magnificent palace in Madrid, filled with priceless treasures, is occupied by the families of Government troops. With shudders we turn away, and, since we cannot help, we try to forget."

It is the absence of any sense of proportion that is so amazing, and as if to emphasise it, the bit about the Duke of Alba's palace is set in black type.

Terry tells Suzy he will never tell Andre of their marriage. Suzy feeling she must at last confess everything to Andre, returns to the hospital. Unseen—she sees Andre and a woman embracing each other.

CHAPTER TEN

"Suzy has gone back to father," Andre told Terry when he called the next day. "She came in for just a minute this morning. Said there was nothing to do here and she didn't like leaving father alone with the servants. That was part truth, but between ourselves, I think she was a little afraid here."

"When will you be up and around?"

"To-morrow, but I can't go up in the air for ten days or so. I'm going to Nice, the doctors seem to think a little sea air and sunshine are indicated. I asked Suzy if she would like to go too, thought maybe she was firm about going back to Paris. Not especially flattering to me, but as it is all for the best, I am glad she went to father. You'll be home when I get back, won't you?"

On the day after Andre returned from his rest and was flying his new plane for the first time, a French officer introduced Terry to Madame de Charbris. She gave him an intent look, followed by a ravishing smile.

"Pardon me, Captain Moore—but have we ever met before? In Russia, perhaps?"

"I have never been in Russia, Madame. And I'm sure we never have met before. I could not have forgotten where and when, I assure you, if I had ever seen you before."

"Well, if you put it that way, I'm always thinking I've seen some one somewhere before, and since the war I've become worse than ever. Uniforms do have a tendency to bring out similarities, instead of differences in human beings. But now that we have met, won't you come to see me? This evening, a few friends will be at my chateau where I'm living and I hope you will be among them."

Terry said he would be charmed to come, as she moved on across the field.

"She is fascinating," said Terry to the officer. "Who is she, anyway?"

"A remarkable woman and a great help to us in keeping up the morale of the men. You'd have met before this, but she has been away. She has a place in Nice and it was there Captain Charville went to recuperate. They are great friends."

The sight of Andre coming down in a perfect landing attracted Terry's attention just then. But Terry's mind was not altogether on that. He was thinking of Madame de Charbris and Andre—and Suzy.

It was a charming party that evening, gay but informal. Watching the hostess, Terry said to himself that she would be equally at home at the most elaborate ball, but during the war of course she would not err by any show of ostentation. He decided she was one who would do the correct thing in the correct way. Andre showed his admiration for her quite frankly. She showed him no special attention. She was, as a good hostess must, equally interested in all her guests. He had been foolish to attach any importance to what he had learned the afternoon.

The next evening, however, his vague discomfort returned. There had been a secret meeting of the officers. The squadron was to take off as light was breaking, Andre a few minutes ahead of the others. It was suggested that the men return early. But Andre did not return to the hotel. He told Terry he had a call to make. He smiled as he said it.

Baron de Charville as they entered the drawing room after their dinner, suggested to Suzy that she looked tired, she had best rest early. An old friend was coming in for a little chat with him, so he would not miss her. She picked up a magazine and began looking at it listlessly. Suddenly she gasped; her face was set and white.

"What is it, dear?" he asked anxiously.

"Just some pictures at the front—they shouldn't print such things. I'm sorry to have a fit of nerves like this. I think I will go to bed. There's the bell—I'll run along before your friend comes in."

She had just enough presence of mind to take the paper with her. She did not want him to see there were no pictures of twisted wire, bombs bursting or mangled bodies. She rang for Albert. Told him she had to be away for the night—perhaps most of the following day. She could not explain but it was of the utmost importance. He was to tell the baron she was all right, had slept well, had been awakened early by a telephone call from an old friend from New York and had gone to see her.

A few hours later she was at the hotel near the flying field. Captain Charville was not in, she was told. But yes, the English officer had come in just a few minutes before. She ran up the stairs and burst into his room.

"Thank God, you're here," she said. "Don't waste a minute asking questions. I have only an hour or so before I must go back. Look at this, Terry—look!"

He took the magazine and read the caption: "Madame de Charbris and the famous ace Captain Andre Charville at Nice."

"I'm sorry, Suzy, if this agitates you," he said. "But—"

"This is fantastic, Suzy—"

"Listen to me, Terry. That is the woman who shot you. I saw her plainly, twice. Do you think I could ever forget—or be mistaken?"

Terry thought a moment.

"That's why she asked if we'd met—trying to test me. Come, we'll go to her house. I'm quite sure she'll tell me the whole story. Or we'll go to the Intelligence Officer first."

"We can't Terry—not until we find Andre. He may be in actual danger now. And there's another thing. We can't have him dragged into this mess. It would ruin his career. Who knows that, it would kill his father. It is up to us to protect that dear old man from any possible sorrow or disgrace."

"I told you once you were not dumb. I tell you that again," Terry said. "I see your head is working better than mine."

They said nothing as they drove at a terrific speed away from the village out on the country road. When they reached the house they found it in darkness, except for one light in an upper room.

As they crept quietly up the path, Terry spoke in a low, strange voice. "I'll not tell you to keep your courage. Heaven only knows what we may be letting ourselves in for, but I know whatever it is, you will face it. I want you to know I think you are the bravest person, without any exception, I have ever seen."

There was a long wait after they rang the bell, before the door was cautiously opened by the butler.

"Pardon me," said the servant, "but it is very late and Madame gave strict orders—"

"She is expecting us," said Terry firmly. "She knew we were coming to bring her a most important message; perhaps she meant to admit me, herself. I can see by the light that she is waiting for us. We need not be announced."

Holding Suzy firmly by the arm, he had rushed past the butler and was half way up the long flight of stairs.

"Pardon your pardon, sir," said the butler. "You awakened me from a sound sleep and I did not recognize you in the darkness."

At the head of the stairs was the room with the light. The door was not locked. Without knocking, they opened it and rushed in. From below, the butler was watching intently.

"Suzy," gasped Andre. Then fighting for composure, he turned to his hostess. "I don't understand this unceremonious entrance—probably without expected, uninvited guests will explain it to everyone's satisfaction. In the meantime, Madame de Charbris, may I present my wife?—You already know Captain Moore."

And I, too, know Madame de Charbris," said Suzy calmly. "She may not recall me—we met under rather peculiar circumstances."

"Never mind that now," said Terry. "It is not important."

"I am delighted to have you with us, even though your arrival was a little out of the ordinary," said Madame de Charbris graciously. And now—"

"Pardon me, Madame," said Andre. "But as I am responsible, in a roundabout way, for this intrusion, I demand that my wife and Captain Moore offer you their apologies for their outrageous behaviour."

"Andre," said Terry. "We will explain to you later. It is imperative that you come with us at once."

"Since when did you take to issuing orders to me?" asked Andre. "As for my wife—even a jealous woman—"

"Andre," said Suzy firmly. "I will explain. This isn't jealousy. I am not angry. We hoped you would go with us quickly and quietly. As you will not, I must tell you."

"Suzy," cried Terry warningly. "She went on as if she had not heard him."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER-BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed Feeling You Could Push a Bus Over
The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile thickens from your food doesn't digest, it just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sick and the world looks pink.
Bile, fiery drink, palatable laxative and purgative are indispensable. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes the famous, trusted, Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Jammed, starchy, fat-laden, in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's on the red package.

PLANNED PERFECT BABY "TO SHOW THE WORLD"

Parents, Disappointed, Shanghai Now Sue Hospital

Sydney, Sept. 21.

CORNELIUS VALKENBERG DE VILLIERS DREYER and his wife, Elva Mary, claiming that they set out scientifically to produce "a perfect child immune from disease," are suing Wahroonga Sanatorium for £3,000 damages.

The hospital authorities are accused of "unlawfully assaulting" the wife during childbirth by performing an operation.

AIR ROCKET GOES 30 MILES UP AND CONTROLS ITSELF

A SMALL grey-haired man, working in a New York laboratory, has solved the greatest problem facing the future of human flight.

He has discovered how to build a rocket "plane" that can be flown under full control.

Professor A. C. Goddard, is his name. He formed a theory that the future of man's conquest of the air lay in rocket flight.

ONE FAULT

He turned his lively brain to the study of rockets, and soon learned that all the experimental rocket aircraft built had one great fault.

They couldn't be controlled. Once set off they flew anywhere—some straight up, others in a great curve, others falling and running along the ground. He solved the problem. He made a rocket that flew where he wanted it to go. Several flights have been made, some straight up through the stratosphere to heights of 30 miles.

His invention is simple. A gyroscope control throws the propelling force through a series of jets. If the rocket leans to the left the force is

Dreyer alleges that his wife was forcibly compelled to submit to the operation "against the principles of allopathy (method of curing by producing a condition of the system opposite to that essential to the disease) and at a time when she was unable to protest."

He further declares that the doctors imposed their will on Mrs. Dreyer contrary to his principles and better knowledge, and that the baby, in consequence, was born in circumstances which "cannot be analysed in their far-reaching effect."

He asks for £2,000 damages.

NOW BABY TWITCHES

The wife, a former nurse converted to her husband's teachings on the allopathic treatment of disease, is claiming £1,000 from the hospital.

She says she prepared herself to become the mother of "the perfect child"—a child who would prove to the world that immunity from human disease could be scientifically established.

But her baby is not perfect; it twitches in its sleep and is "otherwise showing unnatural symptoms."

All this, the Dreyers allege, is due to reactions on the baby caused by the mother's stricken nervous system following the operation.

1,000 M.P.H.

"These jets work on a circular control so that they have full command in every direction."

He believes that rocket planes could achieve 1,000 m.p.h. or more in the upper stratosphere, rising gently to it, and not using full acceleration at once. The great acceleration might injure the passengers.

PEDAL PLANE FLIGHT German Pilot's Feat Impresses Experts

Berlin, Sept. 20.

PILOTING a small aeroplane, with a propeller driven by foot pedals, Herr Hoffman flew 426 yards in 34.2 seconds at Frankfurt-on-Main to-day.

The machine is the invention of two young engineers of the Junker works at Dessau, Herr Franz Villinger and Herr Helmut Hessler. It measures 30½ metres across the wings, and the propeller measures 1½ metres.

Great importance is attached to the feat by experts of the German Air Force who were present.

They point out that machines provided with pedal propellers would be able to escape from dangerous slips back into the wind.

With the same apparatus Herr Dunnell in 1935 covered distances of 250 and 210 yards at a height of about three feet, and was awarded £250 by the Frankfurt Polytechnic Society.

Shanghai Casino Goes Under The Hammer

Shanghai, Sept. 21.

The old Ritz Casino, once one of the most pretentious and luxurious gambling establishments in the Far East, is scheduled to fall under the auctioneer's hammer here.

Although the title deed to the property is French, the Ritz is actually owned by Carlos Garcia, for years the roulette and Baccarat king of the Orient, who is now understood to be operating a gambling establishment in Reno, Nev.

When the Ritz opened for business in 1932 it was considered the swankiest spot east of Suez. Garcia spent a fortune on the elaborate Casino, took a fortune or two out of it, but gave away another fortune in champagne and good food.

Guests at the Ritz were never bothered with champagne or dinner bills. Liquors and food were free, and each customer was urged to consume as much as he could. Garcia always maintained that a man who lost his bank-roll at the Ritz was entitled to a ride for his money, and he never failed to send his customers home in taxis.

A night at the Ritz was much the same as a night at Monte Carlo. Business was on the same grand scale with thousands of dollars passing over the tables every evening. Decorations were lavish and the music exceptionally good.

Although the Ritz required a fortune to operate, Garcia became a financial power in Shanghai. When the Ritz was closed by Chinese authorities in 1926, Garcia worried little. His customers followed him into the International Settlement where his famous 151-C blossomed and flourished.

The beginning of the end struck in 1929—not because of the depression—but by reason of a new treaty between Mexico and China which abolished Mexico's extraterritorial rights.

Being a Mexican citizen, although of Hoboken parentage, Garcia's gambling empire crumbled at his feet overnight. In sensational raids the Chinese police closed one after another of his establishments, which had become numerous. Barbed wire entanglements were placed around 151-C to prevent the escape of prominent guests, and newspaper photographers enjoyed a field day snapping high society folk en route to the "Black Maria."

Garcia spent whatever savings he had in a vain attempt to fight the Chinese in the courts. After a year in the Amoy Road Jail, he left Shanghai a comparatively poor man.

Although the old Ritz remained as one of Garcia's few possessions, he had borrowed $20,000 against it. To-day, with interest, his account is in arrears over $40,000, and to satisfy the claim the Ritz property is to be auctioned.

Since the Sino-Japanese trouble in 1932, when Japanese shells blew the swanky millionaires' rendezvous to pieces, the Ritz has been a mass of ruins and all but forgotten. Its reappearance in Shanghai courts has been a local night life circles buzzing with reminiscences of the "good old days."—United Press.

Sino-Japanese Tension Eased WAY BELIEVED OPEN FOR CONCILIATION

Shanghai, Oct. 5.
A rapid end of the present deadlock in the Sino-Japanese negotiations is expected to follow the arrival of Mr. Kuwashima, the Japanese Foreign Office expert from Tokyo, this afternoon. It is understood he will travel to Nanking by air immediately he reaches here to convey the instructions of the Foreign Office to the Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Kawagoe.
Negotiations between China and Japan, which were broken off on September 22, are expected to resume soon after the arrival of Mr. Kuwashima.
General Chiang Kai-shek is also expected in Nanking shortly, although it is still not known how far he will personally intervene in the negotiations.

The impression exists that the door is open for conciliation, and although a final adjustment of Sino-Japanese relations is bound to be long drawn out, fears of an imminent "show down" have been allayed.
Meanwhile, the tension locally has greatly relaxed following the withdrawal of most of the Japanese marine guards and patrols from Hongkew, calming the fears of the Chinese residents in Chapei, who have practically ceased their exodus which at one time last week had assumed considerable proportions.—Reuter.

HITLER DEMANDS UNITY COMPLETE FAITH IN 4-YEAR PLAN

WARNING TO PEASANTRY

Berlin, Oct. 4.
Rain and bitter wind marred the Harvest Festival, celebrated throughout Germany last night.
Herr Adolf Hitler, the Chancellor, delivered an oration to 500,000 peasants on Buckeberg Hill, from which point his speech was broadcast to all parts of the country.
He directed a large part of his address to those peasants who resented official price-fixing on their products and declared that if the German harvest dropped twenty per cent. it would spell catastrophe.
Referring to the four-year plan, Der Fuehrer said that within the year, Germany would supply Germany with what she was lacking.
"After a year we shall rise like a granite rock of order and stability in a world which may be more restless," he promised.—Reuter Special.

Prices soared to highest levels since 1931, on the New York Stock Exchange to-day.
Wall Street demonstrated the most bullish sentiment in a very active session, with foreign buying increasing, automobile production and steel production figures mounting and improving carloadings returns providing the encouraging factors.
The Bond Market and issues on the Exchange were also higher.

London, Oct. 5.

Japanese Ask More Protection BOMB PLANTED BY CONSUL'S HOME UNEASINESS IN SHANGHAI

Shanghai, Oct. 3.
Strong representations were made on Thursday by Mr. Suehiko Takaki, the Japanese Consul at Shanghai, to Gen. Ho Chien, Chairman of the Hunan Provincial Government, regarding the finding of a bomb 4 ft. from the Consul's residence, on September 29.
The bomb, said to have been wrapped in a handkerchief, was found by a Chinese passer-by on a grass plot by a path between the Consul's residence and the consulate. The man immediately notified the Bureau of Public Safety, who quietly removed the bomb.
The matter came to the knowledge of Mr. Takaki, resulting in the demarche with Gen. Ho. Pointing out that the finding of a bomb was a serious matter, especially in view of recent anti-Japanese outbreaks in the province, Mr. Takaki asked Gen. Ho why he had attempted to hush up the matter.
Gen. Ho, it was reported, sought to minimize the affair.
JAPANESE DESIRES IN HONGKONG
The Foreign Relations Committee of the Japanese Residents Corporation has decided to urge the Corporation to seek an increase in the number of Japanese plain clothes policemen in the S.M.P. A proposal to ask for the appointment of Japanese to head the Dikwell Road, Hongkew, and Yangtze Road police stations of the S.M.P. was, however, shelved for a more thorough investigation.
A petition on similar lines was addressed on September 28 to Mr. Stirling Fessenden, Secretary-General of the Shanghai Municipal Council, the Federation of Amalgamated Japanese Street Unions, the communication pointing out that the adoption of these measures would increase the effectiveness of police protection.

Dorado Delays H.K. Flight

ONE HAND ON TITLE

These are the New York Yankees, whose three straight victories over the New York Giants since their defeat in the first game of the World Series, places them within one step of the 1936 championship. This is one of the greatest teams ever assembled. They have played before the biggest crowds in baseball's history during the past few days, and they will share the biggest "pennant prize," their share of the gate receipts of the World Series, ever divided, according to predictions. If they win to-day the series will be over.

YANKEES MAKING SURE OF WORLD BASEBALL TITLE WIN THIRD STRAIGHT IN FIGHT WITH GIANTS

New York, Oct. 4.
The New York Yankees to-day won the fourth game of the World Series, establishing a three to one lead against the New York Giants. The Yanks smashed Carl Hubbell's pitching all over the diamond and the Giants' ace hurler was relieved in the eighth inning when he showed signs of going completely to pieces.
Yankees scored five times on eighteen hits and the Giants scored twice on seven.
The feature of the game was Hubbell's failure. Gabler came out in the eighth when the mighty Hubbell had allowed eight hits and four runs in seven innings. Lou Gehrig hit his second home run of the series, scoring two runs, in the third inning. The Yankees then led four to nothing, Selkirk and Rolfe having batted in tallies in the second and third.
Bartel scored in the fourth for the Giants on Ripple's single, and in the eighth Sam Leslie, pinch-hitting for Hubbell, got home on a hit of Terry's.

The Yankees also scored in the eighth, Gehrig hitting a double and getting home on a single by Powell.
Pearson, recovered from his recent injury, pitched a fine game for the Yankees with seven strike-outs compared with Hubbell's two. Hubbell's defeat was his first this season since July.
The attendance broke the World Series record established yesterday, 66,669 spectators paying $240,591 for seats.—Reuter.

Hubbell Fails
New York, Oct. 4.
With the great Carl Hubbell pitching to the greatest catcher of the year, Mancuso, New York Giants made a bid to even the World Series to-day, but failed miserably. The Yankees combination, Pearson and Dickey, was unbeatable.
The following is the story of the game by innings:
FIRST INNING
Giants—Moore walked and Bartel fanned, swinging. Terry fouled out. Ott came up and Moore was out. (Continued on Page 3)

LONDON POLICE CHARGE CROWD Fascist Demonstration Causes Street Clash

London, Oct. 5.
In Fascist disorders yesterday there have been 53 arrests and numbers injured. It now appears that anti-Fascists, about 100,000 of them, attacked police in Stepney and caused much excitement.—Reuter.

DEMONSTRATION BANNED
London, Oct. 4.
The number of arrests in the Fascist demonstration in the East End of London now total 69.

This demonstration was banned by the authorities at the last minute and police twice charged the crowd with batons to disperse it. There were a number injured, including nine hospital cases.—Reuter.

ATTACKS CUSTOMS BARRIER FRANCE URGING FREER TRADE PROSPERITY FORMULA

Paris, Oct. 4.
Appealing to all nations to follow the example of the French Republic and lower their customs barriers, M. Spinasse, the Minister of National Economy in a nation-wide broadcast to-night, said international conversations had already been begun.
They would be concluded within a few weeks, and prosperity would then become a fact.—Reuter.

SWISS POLICY
The devaluation of the Swiss franc presents itself mainly as an operation of alignment on the leading world currencies, says a local authority. The legal gold cover is not modified and will remain at 40 per cent. The limits of the devaluation have been set. It is considered that the new level, which, in fact, stands provisionally at 30 per cent. under old parity, will allow the Swiss cost of production, formerly too high, a sufficient adaptation to the world situation to enable the revival of business and bring new impetus to exports.
Banking activities and dealings in gold or in securities shall be in no way restricted, as the monetary situation remains very solid while the reserve of gold is maintained at its very high level. The Government persistently prudent financial policy and the sound budgetary situation furnish the strongest guarantees of security.
All the necessary measures have been taken to avoid a rise in the cost of living.
Suffering from poisoning effects, Wong Yuen-ho, 41, of No. 1 Ku Chong Street, has been admitted to the Government Civil Hospital.

British-Portuguese Friendship Stressed GOVERNOR SPEAKS AT RECEPTION

Mention of Anglo-Portuguese friendship was made this morning by His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, and the Consul for Portugal, Senhor Alvaro Brilhante Laborinho, at a reception at the Club Lusitano to mark the 25th anniversary of the Portuguese Republic.
Many guests attended the reception, including H. E. Sir Andrew and Lady Caldecott, who were accompanied by Capt. W. J. R. Cragg, A.S.C., and Mr. H. J. Crutwell, Private Secretary, H. E. the General Officer Commanding (Major General A. W. Bartholomew), the G.S.O.I. (Col. H. C. Harrison), Brigadier H. G. Selth, Smith, Commodore C. G. Sedgwick, accompanied by Paymaster Commander M. A. W. Sweny, Capt. Waller, R. N., Right Rev. Mgr. H. Valtorta, Vicar Apostolic of Hongkong and the Bishop of Macao, Dom. Jose da Costa Nunes.
In proposing the toast of the King, Senhor Laborinho said:—Your Excellency, Ladies and Gentlemen.—For the second time in this Colony, it is my great privilege to receive distinguished guests on the National Day of my Country and I am specially honoured this year, by the presence of Your Excellency. Through many centuries, through stormy periods of world history, through happy and sad occasions, the Anglo-Portuguese Alliance has stood and still stands as an example of friendship between two countries which have the same ideal of universal fraternisation; this political alliance is so deeply rooted in the belief of the people that the friendship between them is inviolable.

STILL MORE ARRESTS

London, Oct. 5.
By now the total number of arrests in the East End disturbances is 84.—Reuter.

Protests Sent

London, Oct. 5.
The Jewish People's Council sent a petition, signed by 100,000 people, to the Home Office yesterday, protesting against the proposed Fascist parade in the East End of London.
The Independent Labour Party announced a counter-demonstration. Fears of serious clashes led to extraordinary police precautions being taken, and 5,000 policemen were drafted to the area where it was suspected trouble might occur.

Batons Wielded

The most exciting incident of the day was the police charge, with batons swinging, to clear Royal Mint Street.
When Sir Oswald Mosley, the Fascist leader, arrived on the scene, he conversed with the Police Commissioner, who intimated that the parade in the East End must not take place. The Fascists would be allowed to march to Blackfriars and disperse on the embankment, however. Police made a second baton charge when the crowd in Leman Street attempted to reach one of the arrested men.—Reuter.

Police Attacked

London, Oct. 5.
Disturbances in the East End of London, arising out of the abortive Fascist march, were splashed in the newspapers to-day.
Accounts of the affair give the numbers of the protagonists as Fascists 2,500, police 6,000 and anti-Fascists 100,000.
The worst disorders occurred in a street in Stepney where the anti-Fascists looted a builders' yard and barricaded the street with a lorry and sheets of corrugated iron, reinforced with torn-up paving stones. The police were greeted with showers of stones, broken bottles, refuse and chairs, thrown from windows. Blank pistol shots were fired and fireworks let off to frighten the police horses and broken glass and nails were scattered about to impede their movements.
Repeated baton charges, in which a number of persons were injured, cleared the street, however.
After the fray a miscellaneous array of weapons such as iron bars, chairs, and nails, and broken bottles, were picked up from the gutters.
While the Fascists describe the decision to ban their march as a surrender to "Red Terror," the Communists declare Sir Oswald Mosley has suffered a most humiliating defeat.—Reuter.

Rioting In Paris

Paris, Oct. 4.
Police arrested 1,300 persons this afternoon in the course of rioting between Communists and members of Colonel de la Roque's Social Party, formerly the Croix de Feu.
The latter attempted to prevent Communists staging a giant meeting at the Parc des Princes, by barricading the streets leading to the place of assembly, thus coming into conflict with the police.

MACAO CELEBRATING NATIONAL HOLIDAY

Macao, Oct. 4.
In commemoration of the 26th anniversary of the Republic of Portugal, Monday will be observed as a general holiday in Macao.
The elaborate programme which has been arranged will comprise the sounding of the Reveille in front of Government House at 8 a.m. by a squad of the Macao Police. At 9 a.m. the national flag of the country will be hoisted at Government House, over all public buildings, military barracks, and naval and maritime vessels in port.
At noon a salvo of 21 guns will be fired from Monte Fort and men-of-war. At this hour, H.E. the Acting Governor, Dr. J. Ferreira Barbosa, will give a reception at Government House. It will be attended by officers of the clergy, members of the consular bodies, government officials, officers of the navy and militia, members of the education staff, members of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, and British and other foreign residents.
From 8 p.m. to midnight all public buildings, military quarters and men-of-war and the principal thoroughfares will be brilliantly illuminated, and a fireworks festival will take place at St. Francisco Gardens.
At 10 p.m. a ball will be held at Government House. In keeping with the occasion of Portugal's National Day, a film entitled "Picturesque Portugal" depicting a large variety of excellent sights of town and country in the Motherland, will be shown at the Capital Theatre in Macao—Our Own Correspondent.
The occasion is also being celebrated in Hongkong. The Consul is holding a reception at the Club Lusitano, which H.E. the Governor will attend, and at night there will be a big ball at the club.

REBELS EXECUTE CAPTIVES RUTHLESS POLICY AT TOLEDO

St. Jean de Luz, Oct. 4.
Ninety Government militiamen, who surrendered when the seminary at Toledo in which they were holding out against the rebel advance caught fire, are reported to have been executed.
Earlier reports said they had been consumed alive in the flames, preferring this death to surrender.
A number of other militiamen who were surrounded and made prisoner during the insurgent advance, are also reported to have been summarily shot.—Reuter.

"THINGS to COME!"

JANE

THE women of Mayfair have lost their heads completely over black. They know very well that they should be wearing colours again by now, but apparently they do not know how to get out of the sombre colour that started with the death of King George V. Everywhere one goes, in London there are all the women wearing black.

Their primary subject of conversation is "black." They ask each other whether it will be better to order clothes for the season in colours or not. They all say that they do not wish to go mourning, and yet one of them has the gumption to go back into colours. The difficulties of the situation have been aggravated by London designers, who are showing collections in black, white and mauve, and are substituting the bright tulips of the Paris show with violets for England.

At one important Dress Opening at least 70 per cent. of the worn by the audience. Lady Warwick, Miss Peggy Johnson, the Duchess of Westminster, Lady Edward Hay and Lady Jersey were just a few of the younger women who were all dressed in black frocks with small black hats, most of them wore long mink coats. I have come across Mrs. Charles Sweeney at several first nights, and also out dancing, she hardly ever wears dark colours, but each time I have seen her she was dressed in black. One dress was black net, slim fitting to the knees, then flounced out to the floor.

Lady Veronika Hornby is one of the few young women who have had enough courage to wear white. She was also out dancing in a slinky white satin dress with little frills around the hem, which continued half-way up the back of the skirt. She also has a charming little waist-length mink jacket with short sleeves which she wears when she goes to the theatre.

To give you some idea of the season's evening coats Angara has sketched two models just to show you how different they can be. One is a knee-length coat made entirely of tightly ruffled chiffon with all the edges cut so that they stand out like stiffly exotic feathers. It is cut tight fitting to the waist, then flared out to the hem. The sleeves are long, and the colour is dark bottle green.

The other coat is full length, and made of the stiffest slipper satin in vivid blue or pink. There is a high yoke at the back, and then the skirt is put in with great folds. Ruffles edge the neck, yoke, sleeves and hem.

The evening dress sketched is in light tan-coloured flat crepe, and gives you an idea of the type of drapery which will be most fashionable this season. Enormous folds hanging from one shoulder are looped up again to the waist. The full skirt hanging in a panel from the centre back is draped up between the feet like Turkish trousers. The bodice is high in front, low at the back, and bloused over at the waist.

THERE is a Paris dress house called Alix, whose clothes are greatly admired by the Hollywood film stars. I think in a very short time we will be seeing their modes in London. This season Alix's collection is highly eccentric, exotic and beautiful. The evening gowns are mostly in soft white or pale pastel materials draped in many yards from the shoulder to waist or else looped up between the feet in the Turkish style. One dress has a drapery that looks like a transparent cloak. This can be taken from the shoulders and worn round the waist, forming a kind of second skirt. A crinoline gown is made of many layers of organza heavily folded at the edge over stiffening. One layer of black is placed over two layers of white, and the hem is decorated by strips of coloured taffeta arranged like a rainbow. Heavy silk mosquito netting and bead netting are used for evening coats and cloaks. One black net cape is worn over a vest of sequins. A long-waisted evening coat is skirted with bead netting falling to the ground.

The day clothes are less exotic and pleasantly practical, olive green and a dark shade of mauve being the most popular colours. Some of the suits have short-waisted jackets flaring out for ten inches below the waist. This exaggerated flare is sometimes used for a tiny cape or collar. The sleeves are accentuated above the elbow. Many of the frocks have front draperies. One has heavy folds swinging loose from the neck to the hem, the dress underneath being tightly belted.

Multiplication Tables

RECENTLY I was invited to have dinner in the sky-scraping apartment of a New York actress.

Directly I entered the tiny living-room of the flat I noticed two unusual features. One, the absence of a dining table. Two, a frosted glass panel, decorated with hand painted designs and lit from behind, let into one wall.

At dinner-time a coloured servant entered, pressed a wall button and eased the glass panel out of the wall. Two chromium legs came with it, clicked into place, and supported the newly-appeared dining table.

Hinged on its lower side, sitting snugly into the wall, this novel table was composed of a thin, hollow slab of strong glass, illuminated by strip lights. Scratch-, stain- and heat-proof, of course, and throwing upwards a complexion-kind peach glow.

All kinds of glass, wood or metal tables can be let into the wall with only minor plasterers' operations, painted, colloured or decorated so as to form a part of the room's scheme, and let down easily at meal times to accommodate six or seven people.

Even simpler, of course, is the "wall-panel table," which is not actually built into the wall, but folds up flush against it. I have seen tables of this kind, made of plain veneered woods, which, even in their folded state, are an asset to their rooms.

One of the most ingenious normally resembles a tall, shallow piece of furniture rather like a wardrobe, sitting up against the wall. Nests of cupboard doors surround three long, vertical panels.

At meal times the centre panel pulls out and down and is supported on folding legs to form a table. Smaller panels on either side turn

Ingredients.—Four halibut steaks, pepper and salt, parsley, lemon juice, 3oz. margarine.
Wash and dry the halibut and dust each side with salt and pepper. Melt a little margarine in a fire-proof dish and put in the halibut. Place the remainder of the melted margarine on top and put the fire-proof dish under a red hot grill. Baste well during grilling, re-season with salt and pepper and add a squeeze of lemon juice. Turn halibut now and into cushioned benches for six people.

As each panel pulls out it reveals a number of small shelves for dining services and cutlery.

The sideboard-table has come to stay. In the most usual model two thicknesses of table-top pull out horizontally from it, and are supported on steel runners and two folding legs to make a table for five.

I have kept the simplest of all until the end. It is a light, wood table for six with slab supports at each end. By turning two screws you can fold these supports flat beneath the top, so that the whole thing tucks easily beneath a divan.

again so that both sides are basted and become golden brown and crisp. When done garnish with chopped parsley, and serve in the same dish that it was grilled in with the remaining margarine and lemon juice round it. (Sufficient for four persons.)

Fry mushrooms in hot margarine and serve round the halibut.

Savoury Turbot

Ingredients.—Cold turbot, or any other white fish, parsley, 2 back rashers of bacon, pepper and salt, 4 tablespoonsful breadcrumbs, 2 tablespoonsful rice, 2 ozs. melted margarine.

Try the bacon and cut it into shreds. Cook the rice in a little boiling water till tender. Flake the fish, taking care to remove all the bones. Drain the rice well and mix it with the fish and breadcrumbs. Add parsley, finely chopped, and season well with salt and pepper. Lastly, add the melted margarine. Brush well several scallop shells with melted margarine and pile the mixture into each; cover with white breadcrumbs and place small pieces of margarine on top.

Bake at the top of oven for five or six minutes at moderate temperature (Regulo mark 5), and then place under a hot grill till a golden brown. Garnish with a little chopped parsley mixed with a little chopped hard boiled yolk of egg. Serve very hot.

Chained Woman "Kidnapped": Liner Battle

MAN'S EVENING SUIT TORN: WOMEN BEATEN

New York, Sept. 12. A WOMAN who took part with 150 Communist agitators in a sensational battle aboard the departing German liner Bremen early to-day as a protest against Nazi interference in Spain was later found to be missing.

The woman, who followed the example of the ringleaders of the demonstration in chaining herself to the rails of the liner, was last seen being beaten in the efforts to clear the ship of shouting men and women.

Mr. Allen Stuntz, lawyer for the arrested Communists, expressed fears that she was a prisoner of the enraged German sailors aboard the Bremen.

The 150 BOARDERS demonstration was staged a few minutes before the Bremen was due to sail. At a prearranged signal, the 150 men and women, who had boarded the liner with passengers, threw off outer garments and exposed white sweaters inscribed with anti-Nazi phrases.

The women, chanting "Down with Nazi intervention in Spain," began screaming hysterically when officers ordered them from the ship. One of them hit an officer in the face, and in a few seconds there was turmoil.

Banners were unfurled and then used as weapons against the German sailors.

Women shackled themselves to the ship's rails, and sailors brought blow-torches to liberate them.

DRAWN INTO FIGHT

An American, Mr. Allen Stuntz, who had gone aboard in the swimming dress to see friends off, was drawn into the fight, and emerged with his suit in tatters.

Germany's boxing hero, Max Schmeling, walked up the gangplank when the battle was at its height. He stood and clenched and unclenched the fists that felled Joe Louis.

He seemed about to join the fight but caution got the better of him, and he hurried to his cabin.

Police declared that the riot was much fiercer than a similar disturbance aboard the Bremen a year ago when the Nazi flag was torn down.

They investigated reports by witnesses that life preservers and pieces of lead pipe were used by sailors to subdue the frenzied women.

Nameless Ship MOSCOW ORDERS DELETION

A Soviet ship is sailing the seas without a name.

She is—or was—the cargo vessel, Alexey Rykov, but when she left Hay's Wharf, London, her name had been painted out. Only her port of registration, Leningrad, was left.

Seamlike superstition, disliking any change of name, is not so strong as the word of Moscow. Rykov was one of the former Soviet politicians denounced during the recent terrorist trial. Therefore the Alexey Rykov must find another name.

The Karl Marx, also, strangely enough, a Soviet vessel, has not had her name changed. But before she became the Karl Marx she was called Diana, goddess of moonshine.

BEAUTY QUEEN SPY'S SUICIDE

"Husband Betrayed For Country"

Paris, Sept. 20. DEATH has set its seal on the drama of Mme. Cridlig, the blonde beauty queen aged 20, convicted of espionage against France.

Broken with remorse at having supplied the evidence which brought five years' imprisonment for her husband and a sentence for herself, she swam out from the fashionable promenade at Rabat yesterday and allowed herself to drown.

A friend said to-day: "Her husband, a sergeant-major in an anti-aircraft regiment, would never have been tried for espionage had it not been for the fact that Mme. Cridlig became friendly with a young French army officer."

"PREYED ON MIND"

"They went out for motor rides together, and the outcome was that she intercepted a letter from her husband to a German agent, which led to Cridlig's imprisonment. "It preyed on her mind, although I told her that she had betrayed her husband for the sake of her country." When the news of his wife's death was broken to him last night Sergeant-Major Cridlig said: "I knew she bitterly regretted what she had done."

Beer Is Not A Medicine

—EXPERTS

Washington, Sept. 20. The federal government has formally decided that beer is no medicine for a Hollywood siren trying to reduce her hips.

The government held that beer is beer and might fine stuff, indeed, but that anybody who claims it will turn a fat lady into a slim one isn't much interested in her waistline.

The decision was handed down by the Federal Trade Commission in the case of the Cereal Products Refining Co., San Francisco, and the Acme Brewing Co., Los Angeles, and Associated Distributing Companies, which had plastered California with billboards saying their beer was made with a non-fattening formula.

The commission said that, by its by to the tendency of Acme beer to "slenderize" those who quaffed it. The federal trade commission's experts drank a lot of this beer and didn't lose any weight. They analyzed it and decided:

"The beer brewers are touchy folks on the subject of what is fattening and what is not, so the commission worded its complaint carefully, thus:

"All beer, including 'Acme' cannot be truthfully represented as non-fattening for all people and without properties for inducing increase in weight, unless consideration is given to the individual dietary habits, physiological idiosyncrasies and fat-producing tendencies of beer consumers."

Acme beer, being plain beer, the commission continued, does contain properties which are capable of being converted into fat, while it has no ingredients which cause hips to fade away.

The American Brewers' Association said it did not want to be involved in Acme's private fight with the government, but it was quick to point out that "beer is no more fattening than any other nourishing food."

Henry C. Hallan, the secretary, read from scientific opinion to prove that beer contains only a small trace of fat.

"Although a person who is undernourished might gain weight drinking beer, that would be because the beer better adds him to digest his food," he added.—United Press.

"Prisoner" Cannot Go to Prison

ADMISSION REFUSED

The tangled affairs of a man who has offered to return to Walton Gaol, Liverpool, four times recently, in order to complete his sentence, but who has not been allowed to do so, are likely to be straightened out in a day or two.

George W. Santos, a 35-year-old motor mechanic, of Blackburn-road, Oswaldtwistle, was sentenced at Blackpool on July 23, to three months' hard labour, for alleged loitering with criminal intent. He pleaded guilty, but four days after he began to serve his sentence he decided to appeal. He was granted bail and left the prison.

The Appeals Committee then ruled that the appeal could not be heard as he had not secured bail within 21 days of conviction.

Santos then attempted to return to prison, but the prison authorities apparently had no authority to accept him.

Mr. H. Singleton, Clerk to the Blackpool Magistrates, stated that it had been suggested by the prison authorities that he should issue another commitment order, but he did not think he was entitled to do so. Santos attempted to surrender to the Church (Lancashire) police and they communicated with Blackpool. The police could not act, however, as there was no commitment order in existence against Santos.

During the civil war in Spain, Soviet Russia sent its first ambassador to Spain, M. Marcelo Rosenberg, is being greeted by the crowds, lists raised in the Communist salute, when leaving the Presidential Palace in Madrid after having presented his credentials.

REBUILDING ADDIS ABABA

Planned As Garden City ROME TO FOOT THE BILL

Rome, Sept. 21

Addis Ababa, the capital of the new Italian Empire, is in the process of transformation and glimpses of its ultimate splendour when it will be converted into a garden city are shown in the town plan which has been approved by the Duce.

Experts have already returned to Rome from Addis Ababa after studying the project, and only the rains prevent it being put into execution. The City of Rome will pay for this new Addis Ababa. The only buildings that will be spared from the pick-axe will be the Imperial Palace and the Cathedral Church of St. George, "so as to signify the complete domination of Italy over the Abyssinian Empire."

The nerve centre of the town will be a huge square, with roads radiating to all the other quarters, which will be known as the "Square of the Viceroy." Here a Fascist bell tower will be built, which will ring when parades or anniversaries are to be celebrated.

The square will be surrounded by arcades, so that people can go round it even when it rains, and on these arcades two-storey premises will be built, where the administrative and governmental work of the new empire will be transacted.

The Imperial Palace will be converted into a residence for the Viceroy, and will occupy a prominent place in the square. The main artery of the town will be the Maconen Road, in memory of the Ras of the name who was faithful to the Italians during the 1900 campaign.

ARMS FACTORIES This will lead to the Cathedral, where a magnificent public garden will be made. Nearby, the commercial section of the city will rise, but Italy's ambition does not rest here.

The town will be dotted with little parks, and tropical plants will flower in order array.

Near the station, also to be reconstructed, there will arise an industrial zone. Arms factories will be included.

Addis Ababa will boast six barracks of huge dimensions, and there will be two residential quarters, one exclusively for the Abyssinians and the other for the Italians, so that the two will not mix.

The native quarter has yet to be studied, as it has to be ascertained how many Abyssinians will eventually reside in the capital. For the Italians accommodation will be made for about 200,000 people, and they will have little two-storey houses surrounded by gardens.

Finally, Addis Ababa will not be a walkway, as it is expected that once it is reconstructed it will have to be enlarged, and one of the main features will be that, although some of the houses will be very large, none will be higher than two storeys.

Confidence

May Fade at 57

"Fifty-seven is an age when men sometimes lose confidence in themselves."

Dr. Philip Barlow, deputy coroner, made the remark recently at the Paddington inquest on Mr. Norman Spicer, father of Miss Dorothy Spicer, the airwoman.

Mr. Spicer was 57. He died after falling from a window in St. John's Wood. "Suicide while of unsound mind" was the verdict.

It was suggested that Mr. Spicer thought wrongly that his business was becoming less successful.

BRITISH-PORTUGUESE FRIENDSHIP STRESSED

between our countries is mirrored in cordial individual relations.

HONGKONG FRIENDSHIPS

Last year, on the same occasion, I remarked that Anglo-Portuguese friendship was not only on paper, but was manifested in this Colony, by personal relationships in private life, and in official intercourse.

Naturally, my short residence in Hongkong at that time, did not permit me more than a slight observation of the facts, but I had seen enough to awaken my gratitude. However, to-day, with a more perfect knowledge of the kindness, courtesy, protection and generosity of the British people and officials towards the Portuguese citizens who have made their homes in Hongkong, I am very pleased to avail myself of this solemn National Day for my Country, to express public and solemnly, my sincere and grateful acknowledgment, coupled with the thanks of the Portuguese Community, and also to remark that, in my official capacity, when it has been necessary for me to be the middle-man between the Hongkong and Macao authorities, I have always found the same cordial co-operation and understanding as might be expected between brothers.

Usually in receptions of this character, the Consul is supposed to say a few words in praise of his own country and the significance of the anniversary. I feel however, that on this occasion I cannot do better in praising my country than to exalt its loyalty to the Anglo-Portuguese Alliance, which has bound so closely two nations which have spread their Colonial Empires throughout the world and have fought side by side for the maintenance of universal peace.

The Republic was established for the welfare of the Nation, and on behalf of Portugal, I express my gratitude to the Hongkong authorities for all they have done for the Portuguese Community of this Colony.

Your Excellency, Honourable members of Council, my dear Colleagues, ladies and gentlemen, in thanking you for your kind presence, I have the honour to propose the toast of His Majesty The King. The toast was honoured with enthusiasm.

GOVERNOR'S REPLY

Sir Andrew Caldecott replied:—On behalf of all your guests, Mr. Consul, I desire very cordially to felicitate you and all our other Portuguese friends in this Colony on the occasion of your National Day; and on behalf of my countrymen and myself I wish to reciprocate most warmly the sentiments which you have expressed regarding the historic friendship and fraternity between our two nations.

Here in this corner of the world Portugal and Britain stand side by side also in a very literal sense, for Macao is our near neighbour, and it has been my privilege this morning on behalf of the Government and people of this Colony to send a telegram of greeting and congratulation to His Excellency the Governor.

I personally am looking forward greatly to an opportunity of visiting Macao and to seeing for myself all those scenes of beauty and interest of which I hear so often from the lips of others.

I like also to think it an emblem of the goodwill that binds the two Colonies that in the Reception Hall at Government House here the most prominent picture is a water-colour drawing, not of Victoria or Kowloon, but of Macao.

I now ask you to charge your glasses and, on this 26th anniversary of the proclamation of the Republic of Portugal, to drink to the health of its President, Ladies and Gentlemen, the President of the Portuguese Republic.

The toast was cordially honoured.

There will be a committee meeting of the Hongkong branch of the English Association in the Urban Council chamber on Friday, October 9, at 5.15 p.m.

C. W. A. Scott who has again proven his almost superhuman ability to win Air Marathons, paid definite tribute to the supreme value of 'Ovaltine'. On his arrival in Johannesburg, he immediately acknowledged the great help which 'Ovaltine' had given him in his magnificent achievement.

Just as on an equally famous occasion when Scott partnered by the late Capt. Black won the England to Melbourne Air-race, 'Ovaltine' played its part in giving the fliers abundant energy for their ordeal. Practical experience in many other notable feats of endurance, and in all conditions of everyday life, has proved that 'Ovaltine' is unequalled for maintaining perfect physical fitness and abundant vitality.

YOUNG WOMAN FINED

FOR SOLICITING IN PEDDER STREET

On a charge of soliciting in Pedder Street on the night of September 30, a young woman named Wong Kan, aged 20, was fined $25, with the alternative of one month's hard labour, by Mr. Balfour at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Constable Jumbur Singh said he arrested the defendant after she had accepted a European.

When the defendant was asked if she wished to say anything, a man in Court shouted out that she was too afraid to speak. He claimed to be her husband.

Sub-inspector Whelan, who prosecuted, said the man was an actor and the defendant was his mistress. The defendant said that as she was walking down Pedder Street on the night in question, the constable approached her and asked her where she was going. She told him she was going home. The Indian then asked her to go away otherwise he would have her arrested. She told him "to go ahead" whereupon he took her into custody.

GOVERNMENT TRADE ESTATES

Various plans have been initiated to bring new life to old industries in Britain, and during the past two years the sum of £5,000,000 has been earmarked
for the use of the Special Commissioners. Among the many schemes for districts in which
the old industries are not expected appreciably to recover, are some intended to attract new enterprise by the establishment of Trading Estates, and thus establish new means of livelihood
for the unemployed. The first of these estates, which has been organised under the name of the North Trading Estates Company,
has just acquired a site of 700
acres in the Team Valley to the south of Newcastle-on-Tyne, for which the sum of nearly £70,000
has been paid. The development
of this scheme will be watched
with keen interest, for it is the first time that a group of independent "business" men have administered State funds provided for the reconstruction of
the Special Areas. The Team
Valley being practically virgin
soil, the development can proceed unhampered by previous building and road schemes. Here modern factories will be erected round a centre formed by service buildings such as post-office, bank,
restaurant, etc. According to the requirements of the industries
seeking accommodation, the factories will be provided with cold storage, canteens, club rooms,
recreation grounds, etc. The
site was chosen with special consideration for its excellent communication by sea, river, road
and rail, and there is plenty of labour available in the surrounding districts. Possible future needs for the housing of a growing population have been catered for, and the assistance of the Royal Institute of Architects
will assure that the entire design
and lay-out will conform with
the highest standards of beauty
and efficiency. Within the next few weeks the construction of
two main roads, one from north
to south and the other from east
to west will be begun, and it is expected that the whole scheme
will be completed early in 1937.
Thirty-five industrial concerns
have already made enquiries regarding accommodation at Team Valley, and it is expected that small business men will take the opportunity to avail themselves
of the facilities which exist in connexion with the reconstruction schemes for the Special Areas to obtain loans to establish themselves in the neighbourhood.
As there is also reason to expect that substantial Government orders connected with the new defence plans will be placed in these new industrial centres, it is hoped that the venture of the Trading Estates will help to exercise the dead hand which has
for so long rested on the populations of the Special Areas.

The Queen Goes Home

It Was at Marlborough House, Built by the Victor of Blenheim,
That She Met King George When They Both Were Children, and
There They Lived Before Ascending the Throne

By ERNEST H. RANN

MARLBOROUGH HOUSE, WHERE QUEEN MARY PLAYED AS A CHILD
MEMORIES SWEET AS SHE MAKES IT HER HOME.

QUEEN MARY, as has been expected, has left Buckingham Palace to live in Marlborough House.

It was almost inevitable that
Her Majesty should go there,
for King Edward VIII, has moved across to Buckingham
Palace, and his old quarters in
St. James's Palace have been taken over by his brother, the Duke of York, heir presumptive
to the Throne.

QUEEN MARY will be in familiar surroundings, and surroundings far more homey, one
may say, than Buckingham Palace
across the Mall, in a house full
of dear and affectionate memories.

It was here, some 65 years ago,
that she first met the little boy
who was afterward to be her husband—King George. She was 3
years of age, he was 5.
Her mother, the Duchess of Teck, wrote to his mother, the Princess of Wales (Queen Alexandra), asking if she might send
"little Mary, she is now old enough, to play with your George."

They met, they played hide-and-
seek among the trees in Marlborough House garden; they began
an affectionate friendship which ripened into love.

For nine years, before she came to the Throne, she lived at Marlborough House, and in "moving
in" again she is only renewing associations that must be dear and refreshing to her heart.

Her friends say that she has liked Marlborough House, although its 200 rooms—it is the largest royal residence in London, except Buckingham Palace—have made
little appeal to one who has always held that a house should be a home.
But its five-acre garden is a haven
of peace, filled with old English
flowers such as geraniums, snapdragons and foxgloves, all favourites of the Queen.

ONLY once a year lately has
there been any sign of life
about the old brick building. This was when the present King, then Prince of Wales, lent the garden
for an annual children's charity
fete, and himself stepped across
from St. James's Palace, hatless,
to join in the fun.

Marlborough House, standing
back from the Mall, half-hidden in
its wide, spreading garden, is, as has been said, one of the greatest royal residences in London, and it can boast of a life of more than 200 years.

The cost of its upkeep is said
to run to £2,000 a week. It has become so closely associated with the British Royal Family that few people think of its origin and the early history connected with its name. If John Churchill had not met Sarah Jennings there might have been no Battle of Blenheim;

and if there had been no Battle of Blenheim there might have been
no Marlborough House.

IT was the proud, imperious and redoubtable Sarah who secured
from Queen Anne the lease of a suitable plot of land on which to build a residence, the terms being
so easy that they consisted of nothing more than a ground rent
of 6s. a year.

That grant to the no longer
popular Marlborough was a great deal criticised, especially because
the work involved the uprooting of
an oak sapling grown from a Boscobel acorn planted by King
Charles II, and the lampooners
were busy with verses suggesting
that the tree should have been allowed to grow until it could serve as a gallows for Duchess Sarah.

Looking round for an architect,
her eye alighted on Sir Christopher Wren (much to the heartburning
of Sir John Vanbrugh, who had built Blenheim, and was inclined
to forget the squabble he had had
with the Duchess over his fees).
And on a fine warm day in May in 1709 the foundation stone of

Wren planned a central block,
with two wings flanking a corridor,
all built of Dutch bricks with stone
dressings and balustrades. It greatly impressed Defoe, who wrote, "The palace of the Duke of Marlborough is in every way
answerable to the grandeur of its master. Its court is very spacious, and finely paved, the
offices are large, and, on each side,

THE Duke and the Duchess were
at last gathered to their fathers,
and the long lease to the Marl-
boroughs expired in 1879, when the house reverted to the Crown. It was then given to the Princess Charlotte,
second heiress to the Throne, and
her husband, afterward King Leopold of the Belgians, and the uncle
and mentor of Queen Victoria.

It was the dower house of Queen
Adelaide, the widow of King William
IV, and when she passed on Lord
John Russell, at the instance of Queen Victoria, brought in a bill
appropriating the house to the Prince of Wales (King Edward VII).
Joseph Hume, that arch economist,
was up in arms, and declared that
the proposal was premature, since
Hampton Court and Kensington
Palace, which were only partially occupied, were at the disposal of the Crown already. However, the bill was carried, and by far the most brilliant period in the life of Marlborough House was in the long years between King Edward's marriage
and his accession.

ONE of the most interesting rooms
is the library. It is one in name only. It was a favourite form of Victorian humour to make a display
of bogus titles, such as Hood composed for the Duke of Devonshire
at Chatsworth and for Dickens at Gads Hill. Few of these, however,
beat the Marlborough House collection for point and humour, and some
may be mentioned as illustration—
Boyle on Steam, Lever on Lifts, Turn-Over by Pargo, Johnson's Contradictionary, Shutters on Draughts, Idols of the King, Lady Godiva on the Horse, Bacon's History of Greece,
Cochin's Lays on China, the Voyage
of Noah by Arkwright, Lochs and Quays of England, Sparks on the Carburator, and Constable's Notes
on Motoring.

Marlborough House was fully prepared for the Prince of Wales (King Edward VIII) some years ago, but he would not leave St. James's Palace. "There it stands to-day," with only a few alterations to meet Her Majesty's individual tastes in decoration and furnishing.

PHOTOGRAPHING HARBOUR: CAMERA, FILMS CONFISCATED

A SENSATIONAL RAID BY POLICE OFFICERS UPON THE INSTITUTE OF ENGINEERS' AND SHIPBUILDERS' PREMISES ON THE WATERFRONT ON FRIDAY MORNING CULMINATED IN THE SEIZURE OF A JAPANESE WHO WAS CAUGHT IN THE ACT OF TAKING PHOTOGRAPHS OF HONGKONG HARBOUR.

This startling incident has been brought to light as a result of "Telegraph" inquiries. Reticence is being maintained by the local Police authorities regarding the affair.

The incident occurred at 10 a.m. on Friday morning.

The Japanese, who is stated to be a visitor to Hongkong, walked into the Institute premises, which command a fine unobstructed view of the harbour, including the naval dockyards, and commenced taking photographs.

When he arrived the Institute was deserted except for Chinese employees.

Shortly afterwards, however, one of the members, Mr. A. Harper, entered the rooms, and saw the Japanese on the verandah. Mr. Harper immediately telephoned Police Headquarters, and a squad of police quickly arrived on the scene.

The camera was seized and the man was taken to Police Headquarters.

After a statement was taken, he was released. The camera and films, however, were confiscated by the authorities.

Hongkong has been singularly free of spy mania for some years now. It is recalled that several arrests, principally of Japanese, have been made in the past, however.

One such case occurred at Lyemooon Barracks, where a Japanese was arrested on the hillside in the vicinity of the Forts. In his possession was discovered complete sketches of the fortifications which, just before his arrest, he had unsuccessfully attempted to tear up.

The use of cameras, even by British subjects, is strictly restricted in Hongkong.

WINTER SOCIAL SEASON KICKS OFF WITH TWO BIG SUCCESSES

HONGKONG can thank its lucky stars for one thing: Bob and Bert Hellman, latest additions to the Colony's bunch of professional musical artists don't work under Trade Union rules. They played on two pianos for five hours without a break at the Hongkong Hotel Roof Garden on Saturday, the most brilliant dual pianoforte achievement ever accomplished in Hongkong.

One trembles to think what the T.U.C. would say, but nobody cared on Saturday (least of all Bob and Bert) for to nearly 500 people it meant five hours of splendid entertainment.

As usual the Hongkong Hotel's contribution to the ushering-in of the Colony's social season was magnificent. The Roof Garden, freshly adorned with a new decorative motif, and proudly showing off its new and artistic orchestral staff, presented a charming spectacle, and went a long way towards creating the type of atmosphere so essential to the success of such a gala night.

SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENT

The management made a bold experiment in arranging for the whole of the night's music to be supplied by two pianists, but the innovation was a tremendous success. Firstly it was the novelty which appealed, but later the crowd reared its approval in appreciation of the sheer music of the present-day waltz, slow fox-trot, quick-step and tango. Pat and Andy (as they have become known to Hotel patrons) chose Saturday night to touch top-form. They opened with a perfect waltz, which the crowd at the head of the hall repeated round about 2 o'clock yesterday morning, and then proceeded to delight with a quick-step, slow fox-trot, tango and their famous rhythm dances. "Dead" Son Now Radio Announcer

BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN KILLED AT MONS

A Glasgow woman, 18 years after the Armistice, has received news that her only son, John Aird, who was believed to have been killed in France during the War, is alive and well in Canada.

She is Mrs. Helen Tweedie (she has been married twice) and in his teens, her son, then a boy in his teens, went to Canada 25 years ago, and on the outbreak of War joined up with the Canadian forces. She received the report of his death from a friend who fought by his side.

Now the "Dead" man has succeeded in tracing his mother. She was an inmate of a Glasgow hospital when the news came from her son. His letter ran, "I am pleased after all these years of absence to get in touch with you again. I am married, with a large family, and I am a radio announcer. Please give me all the information about yourself."

Mrs. Tweedie is replying—fully.

PASSENGERS LOCKED IN CABINS

Extraordinarily rough weather was experienced by the N.Y.K. liner Atsuta Maru whilst en route from Hongkong to Manila last week, according to advices just received from the Philippines capital.

The Atsuta Maru, en route to Australian ports, encountered the full force of the typhoon reported by Manila Observatory early last week.

Passengers, it is stated, were locked in their cabins owing to the heavy seas that continuously swept the decks of the ship.

Tilden And Vines May Play Four Times In Hongkong

"BIG BILL" Tilden, Ellsworth Vines and Miss Jane Sharp, three famous professional tennis players, who, as the Americans so picturesquely put it, are barnstorming the Orient, arrive in Yokohama to-day and receive their first glimpse of the Far East. On November 2 they sail from Kobe, and seven days later they will be in Hongkong. Thus, at long last we have definite news about our illustrious visitors. The exclusive Telegraph announcement on Saturday that Tilden and Co. will not only be coming to Hongkong, but are prepared to play tennis here, aroused widespread interest. That announcement can now be amplified. If the President Lincoln, by which the tennis Aces will be travelling from Kobe to Manila, keeps strictly to schedule, our visitors will arrive here early in the morning of November 9, and will sail again the following night. This means Tilden and his colleagues will be in the Colony for nearly 48 hours, sufficiently long, anyhow, for them to make two appearances on the tennis court. Then they will continue their journey to Manila, stay over for couple of days and be back in Hongkong again in the early hours of November 16. The ship will remain in port two complete days, which will enable the players to give further exhibitions.

Financial Side Not Likely To Worry

BRIEFLY then Hongkong has every hope of seeing Tilden, Vines and Miss Sharp in action during four days, and I can state, unofficially, though quite definitely, that the Hongkong L.T.A. is going to strenuous efforts to make full use of these four opportunities. Of course the fact that the professionals have expressed their willingness to play "does not" make the matter. There is a tremendous amount of work to be done and quite a few obstacles to overcome. Tilden has indicated the financial terms under which they will play, and although I cannot make them known here, I can say that they are reasonable, and I should imagine, very acceptable to the Hongkong L.T.A. It is a downright offer of the type which will allow our organisers to make a fairly sound estimate of the likely results. So far as the financial side of the matter is concerned, there seems to be no reason for worry.

The Bigger Question

THE bigger question concerns the arrangement of matches. Three professionals are visiting us, including one lady. According to Vines they are prepared to play with and against Colony talent. But that is out of the question. In granting permission for the Association to stage these exhibitions, the English L.T.A. emphasised that no local amateur player must participate. This point was given additional urgency in a letter from Mr. Justice Lindell, President of the H.K.L.T.A., who personally interviewed Mr. H. A. Sabelli, Secretary of the English L.T.A. in London last month. Under no consideration said Mr. Sabelli must a Hongkong amateur tennis player take part in any exhibition matches by professionals. Well, we have no professional players here, so that leaves us with our three visitors. Of course, we all want to see Tilden and Vines in a singles, but we also want to see Miss Sharp in action, and experience goes to show that the public find more entertainment in doubles than singles play. So we also want to see doubles. The point which, I believe, the L.T.A. is going to consider is whether they will invite Francisco Aragon, the Manila professional, to come here to make up a foursome. It is about the only alternative if doubles matches are to be included in the programme. And the success even of that move is speculative, for it would mean Miss Sharp pairing off with one of the men against the other two. Not that one doubts Miss Sharp's ability to hold her own in such company. It's just that it is unusual. On the other hand, it will be novel, and novelty is the soul of good entertainment. But there, and other details, such as venue and proper accommodation, must be left to the L.T.A. At least the occasion is worth a little hard work and even a bit of inconvenience if necessary. The authorities will be well advised to bear in mind, that Hongkong is dead keen on seeing Messrs. Tilden and Vines, and that it will be vastly disappointed if arrangements to this end cannot be satisfactorily concluded.

Far East And The Davis Cup

I am afraid the formation of a new zone of the Davis Cup competition in the Far East is a dead letter. This idea, which emanated from Australia, and which Mr. Norman Brookes has been canvassing in the course of his world travels during the past three years, sustained an uneasy rebuff at a recent meeting of the Council of the Davis Cup Nations. The committee's report on the suggestion was fully discussed, and eventually it was decided to refer the whole matter back for further consideration. And this after China and Japan had emphatically

Main Bone of Contention

THE main bone of contention by India, China and Japan was that the creation of a Far Eastern zone would entail too much travelling. Which at first glance appears to be a most ridiculous suggestion. But Col. Roe revealed that it was not so preposterous as it sounds. In India, for example, produced a good enough team, it was possible that by competing in a Pacific Zone they might have to play their first match at Honolulu, the next in Yokohama, the next in Nairobi and the next in Australia. And all of this would have to be accomplished between February 1 and June 20. He thought it would be impossible to carry out such a programme. Mr. S. Miyaguchi and Mr. W. Z. L. Sung, representing Japan and China respectively, thought the same way, and said so in no uncertain tones. Only the Dutch East Indies, besides Australia, gave any indication of a desire to participate in a Far Eastern zone, but finally, on the opposition of Great Britain, the matter was referred back to the committee for them to ascertain the views of the interested countries as to whether they favoured the division of the present American zone into two groups—a Pacific group and an American group, with these two groups to be again sub-divided into two sections each, a North and South American and a North and South Pacific section; and whether the winner of the South Pacific section should play the winner of the South American section and the same with the northern sections. The two groups, with the ultimate winners meeting in an Inter-Group final. The necessity of such a system was made clear when it was pointed out that if the Pacific group was a Zone, it would change the whole complexion of the Inter-Zone final which is now played a week before the Challenge Round. It would entail three nations being left, and one would have to draw a bye. This, it was agreed, would be totally unsatisfactory.

Football Match With A Moral

(By "Veritas")

Recreio 1 Joseph's 1

(Alves) (Leonard)

IT is no good trying to disguise the fact that this was a disappointing match. There was no reason why it should have been, unless it was that the Goasano brothers, who are sufficiently entertaining to make any game attractive, were absent.

This particular fact, anyhow, makes Recreio's division of the spoils all the more creditable. Most of the onlookers probably considered St. Joseph's unfairly treated by the result, and if one were to judge a match purely from the point of territorial advantages, the claim would be justified.

But the truth is the Saints were no more, if as much, dangerous on the attack than the Recreio. Both were only a little better than bad. St. Joseph's invasions were certainly of greater duration, but the confusion which existed between the inside forwards completely set this at naught.

Perhaps the biggest disappointment was the work of the Delgado-Castilho wing. Something went radically wrong with these two players. They were positively flustered by the number of times the ball was directed to them by Castro, Omar and Leonard, which made it all the more sad when they frittered away rare opportunities.

Possibly the smallness of the ground had something to do with this comparative ineptitude of the Saints' attack. Anyway they always appeared to be crowding each other, and one waited in vain for a movement which comprised long swinging passes. It was all this sort of short-dally-cutting type of passing which was well and good for three parts of the field, but came to nothing against resolute backs who cut out the fancy stuff and just waded in with first-time kicking.

Furthermore it gave the Recreio defenders lots of time in which to position themselves.

Neither did Recreio as a team contribute anything to the open type of game. It was left to Gomes, diminutive inside left to exploit this form of attack. Competition played a single-handed game in brilliant fashion. It struck me that if Recreio had boasted another Gomes in the forward line, St. Joseph's would never have got away with a point.

I thought Recreio deserved their point because, apart from the wretchedness of the opposition, for—

Mrs. Krenov To Play In Final Championship

THEN WILL VISIT HONGKONG

(By "Veritas")

A Shanghai tennis champion may be included in the Country Club team which is visiting Hongkong at the end of this week to participate in a series of matches with local teams.

Mrs. B. Krenov (formerly Miss Billie Firth), who is one of the visiting lady players, to-morrow figures in the final of the Shanghai Lawn Tennis Association ladies' singles championship. She opposes Miss C. Tavares.

Mrs. Krenov is a former Shanghai champion and is favoured to win back the title. If she does so, Hongkong L.T.A. might find it worth while to match her and Mrs. Nora Wilson, the present Colony champion, in an exhibition singles. They have never met before, as Mrs. Krenov did not participate in last year's Interport. Mrs. Wilson playing Mrs. Moir in that event and winning 6-0, 2-6, 6-1.

POLICE IN DOLDRUMS: FUSILIERS UPSET: CLUB AGAIN

R. U. RIFLES GIVE PERFECT DISPLAY KOWLOON'S BIG IMPROVEMENT

TWENTY-EIGHT teams scored 80 goals between them in Hongkong league football during the week-end, while as a result of the programme, only eight teams in the three divisions now boast the full complement of points from matches played. Hongkong F.C. in the first division, Royal Engineers in the second and R.A.F. in the third are the only three teams which have not conceded a goal. Club and Sappers have each played two games, the former scoring 12 goals and the soldiers eight, while the Air Force have played but one match in which they scored a single goal. Below will be found impressions of some of the more important games played on Saturday.

ALREADY the question is being asked: "Who is capable of stopping the Club?" Twelve goals in two matches, and a clean sheet on the "against" side of the balance sheet! Unless it is one of the biggest deceptions known to local football, it means only one thing. Club are going to be among the leading contestants for the championship. The way they overwhelmed Eastern Athletic on Saturday, scoring seven times without reply, convinced one that South China "A" will have to play up to their European standard if they are to avert defeat against the Club. And even that is no guarantee.

PHILOSOPHICAL PARAGRAPH

IF one had philosophical tendencies, one could not avoid pondering on the remarkable effect to be gained by a team which makes one or two experimental positional changes, and introduces to a forward line a couple of fast-thinking, able-footed players. Certain things about the Club team stand out a mile as a result of Saturday's match. (a) That Brown and E. Strong are two of the best wing halves the team has ever boasted; (b) that the inclusion of Fleming and Wilson in the attack has improved that section of the team out of all knowledge. Club can now be said to be rich, not only in individual talent, but in team spirit, and such a combination usually produces success and lots of league points.

BEAMING AND KNITTED BROWS

AND while the Club are beaming with delight, Police are knitting their brows in anxious bewilderment. Five-nil kicking the week before can, perhaps, be explained away by the fact that it was the first match of the season. But when it is followed up with a 6-1 whacking on Saturday—and then there is no wonder Police have a slightly jaundiced outlook on things. It seems I spoke a bit out of turn last Saturday when I confidently predicted Police would come into their own as a result of vital team changes. They were no match for the Royal Ulster Rifles machinery. Frustrated and outclassed by a perfect combination just about sums up their debacle. And in view of the score it seems foolishly contradictory to claim that the best feature of the Police was their defence. Yet this was so. McHardy, Blackburn and Parker worked like galley slaves, but they were left helpless and bewildered by the meticulous accuracy and brilliance of the Rifles' attack. On the other hand none of the half backs settled down to anything like a sound display. Gough is still endeavouring to find his feet, and moved so heavily that Campbell, Ferguson and Doherty were able to weave patterns around him.

RIFLES IN HAPPY MOOD

AS for the Rifles, it falls to their happy lot to be able to claim having given one of the finest exhibitions of football seen in the Colony for a long while. So faultless were they in combination that one was reminded instinctively of an American football team which learns its playing codes off by heart and makes play accordingly with mathematical precision. Scarcely a pass was wasted, whether it be made by a half back or forward. Players ran into correct positions like well-trained professionals, and every move appeared to have been based on a theory which had been thrashed out and thoroughly assimilated in the dressing room. Ferguson's leadership of the attack was one of the best things seen on the Railway ground for years, while the goal-scoring propensities of Hartigan on the right-wing were definitely the outstanding feature of an outstanding match. Hartigan claimed three of the six goals, probably the best day's work he has ever accomplished on the football field—at least in senior grade.

REJUVENATED KOWLOON

IF I went astray regarding my ideas of the Police, Kowloon came along to console with a well-deserved ground for years, while the goal-scoring propensities of Hartigan on the right-wing were definitely the outstanding feature of an outstanding match. Hartigan claimed three of the six goals, probably the best day's work he has ever accomplished on the football field—at least in senior grade. Kowloon Chinese, 1 Athletic, 1 (Au Ping-ming) (Lai Wo-gai)

BOUQUET FOR EAST LANCES

THAT'S one bouquet. The other goes to East Lancashire for serving up the biggest surprise of the day. They beat that splendid Royal Welch Fusiliers team by two clear goals after a match palpitating with excitement and full of fine action. This was a match in which both teams gave rousing displays of football. Fusiliers were by no means out-matched, but their forwards were a bit slower in accepting chances, so that although on a balance of play, the Royal Welch should, the honours, the East Lancs got the goals and the points. Winners surprised with their revival. It was nothing like the same team which gave such a lethargic performance a week before. Team changes apparently worked the oracle. Certainly everybody was on his mettle, and it was pleasing to see Sandford retain his form. All the same Smith, East Lancs' inside right was the man of the match. This go-ahead young man led Wheeler and Kentling a merry dance, and but for some timely work by the latter, Smith would have scored more than once. As it was his goal resulted for a place of enterprise. At the other end of the field Swain and Steele were at their best—cool, calculating, and immovable.

FUSILIERS' BIG WEAKNESS

FUSILIERS revealed one weakness which will cause the defeat of the best of teams. The forwards could not finish. In all other phases they were equal to their opponents, but some of the attempts to score goals were woeful. This was solely the cause of their defeat. Parry on the right wing alone showed any real idea of where a goal was stunted, but he wasn't blessed with too much luck. Talbot was again extremely clever in approach play, although he became a trifle obvious when in the penalty area and had his earlier work quickly destroyed by the alert Swain and Steele. Cresty was medical, but played so strictly to the "book" that most of his efforts could be anticipated.

ATHLETIC PAST V. PRESENT

RESULT WAS A DRAW

Kowloon Chinese, 1 Athletic, 1 (Au Ping-ming) (Lai Wo-gai)

Kowloon Chinese and Chinese Athletic had the comparatively unusual experience of playing their first division soccer match yesterday on a rain-drenched ground and under conditions which did not encourage high-class football.

Nevertheless both teams contrived to overcome these difficulties and succeeded in a marked degree, the match, ending in a draw of one goal each, being featured by some excellent play.

Additional colour was lent to the game in so far as eight or nine of the Kowloon Chinese were lay-outed by the Athletic players, while Mr. Little interest was evinced in the first appearance since the World Olympics, of Mak Sui-hon, former Athletic right back.

Both teams kept the ball moving quickly and the exchanges were not extremely fast and entertaining. Athletic forwards were more accurate in their shooting and this encouraged Wong Cheung to give a brilliant display between the sticks. Kowloon Chinese attack was somewhat thrown out of order by the failure of Au Ping-ming to make use of several fine openings.

Chow Man-ki and Yeung Kan-po were go-ahead forwards, but Tang Kwong-sun could not properly overcome the slippery underfoot conditions and was below form. Lui Kow-chui played a skilful game at centre-half.

Athletic were best served by Cheung Ying-tuen in the pivotal berth, while Lim Tak-lee was the outstanding forward and caused considerable anxiety to Mak Sui-hon and his co-defenders. Actually none of the players was very much below par and with both teams playing typically artistic Chinese football, the match was completely entertaining. Athletic took the lead after an evenly contested first half, but there was an element of luck about it. Lai Wo-gai miskicking with the result that Wong Cheung, who had shaped for an entirely different kind of shot, was taken by surprise. Within a couple of minutes Kowloon Chinese were on level terms, Au Ping-ming putting the finishing touches to a right wing movement.

MORE SHANGHAI PLAYERS TO GIVE BADMINTON EXHIBITIONS

(By "Veritas")

NOT only will A. G. Meise and Mrs. T. M. Burton, ex-Shanghai mixed doubles badminton champions, take part in exhibitions of badminton at Club de Recreio to-morrow week, but Mr. J. G. Forbes and Miss Joan Massey, first league players, who are with the Shanghai Country Club tennis team visiting the Colony this week, have expressed a desire to appear.

Accordingly the programme, outlined in the Telegraph last Friday, will be amended, and a second mixed doubles match included. This will be between Forbes and Miss Massey and a selected Colony pair.

Players who have been nominated for mixed doubles trials are asked to note that these trials will be held at the Club de Recreio on Thursday evening of this week, and not Friday as originally arranged. This is due to the fact that the Recreio players are due to travel to Macao on Friday to participate in a Double Tenth sports programme against local Portuguese teams.

The Humber Twelve for 1937, although remaining unchanged in specification, has been reduced in price from £285 to £258.

MOTOR SHOW —Pre-View

AFTER my busman's holiday mountain-motoring in the Alps, I return to find a great number of new models awaiting my inspection.

A fine lot of cars they are, too. After seeing (and riding in) a good many foreign machines, it is good to realise again that Britain is still on top when it comes to sane and honest automobile production. Nearly all the secrets are out now. Though, long before the curtain goes up at Olympia on Thursday, October 13, we shall have seen and tried many of the new models, the Motor Show will not be a whit the less interesting for that.

This year the motor industry wisely decided against change for change's sake alone. Manufacturers like Morris, Wolseley, Riley, and others found that the range of well-tried and popular cars already on the market needed no improvement, and so continued the range with little, if any, modification.

Few Big Changes.

There is little important change as regards design. Coachwork is more graceful (the standardised saloon of to-day is the equal to fine specialised and expensive coachwork of two years ago), and attention has been paid to the need for proper covered-in luggage accommodation.

The Riley concern, I am glad to see, have reintroduced the famous "Nine" Monaco saloon, a car that was probably the most popular of all the low-powered medium-priced machines.

With many improvements, including six-light coachwork, and the famous twin-carburettor four-cylinder 9-h.p. engine, self-changing gear-box, and automatic clutch, a box-section frame and chain drive, the new model is to sell at the price of the forerunner, £295. A very nice move, Mr. Riley.

Then the greatly improved 11-h.p. Falcon saloon, with better-looking coachwork, has been reduced in price to £255.

The "Merlin" Nine is increased in price from £220 to £275. The other models remain unchanged.

Then there are the new B.S. "Jaguars." These fine-looking cars have been improved by engine modifications, which have resulted in a quieter and smoother running; larger brakes have been fitted; the upholstery is now of Dunlopillo.

P-100 headlamps are fitted, and the sideclamps have been recessed neatly into the wings. No specialised coach-builder could provide you with a better-looking car.

I am told that the cost of these extra fittings, at retail prices, is between £40 and £50; the price of the 21-h.p. remains unchanged at £385, and the 11-h.p. is up £10 to £205.

The secret is that the firm hopes to sell twice as many cars in 1937 as it did in 1936, and the profit has accordingly been reduced.

On my way to Ireland for the "T.T." race, I had a run in one of the 21-h.p. saloons, and a very pleasant motor-car it is. Congratulations, Mr. Lyons.

The Alvis programme consists of four new cars, the most noteworthy being the "Speed 25," which takes the place of the justly famous "Speed Twenty." Most important feature is the bigger 31-h.p. six-cylinder engine. There is a new 41-h.p. model, and the other models are the Crested Eagle 20 h.p. and the "Twenty-Five" model costs £270, and the most expensive car is the 43-h.p. saloon at £295.

Rover models for 1937 consist of 10 h.p., 12 h.p., 14 h.p., 16 h.p., and a "speed" model.

All models retain the free-wheel, coachwork dimensions have been increased, and the 10 h.p. saloon has been improved in rear appearance.

The "speed" model is similar to the range, but is fitted with a 20 h.p. engine.

First out with news of what they will actually show at Olympia, the Morris concern is to have eight cars on the stand—three "eights," a "ten" saloon, a "twelve" coupé, "fourteen" saloon, "eighteen" coupé, and "twenty-five" saloon, a representative

by Thomas H. WISDOM

selection of the Morris range of 25 body and chassis types.

Another new model of interest is the new "Lanchester 14," a new car incorporating the well-known Daimler fluid-flywheel and pre-selective gearbox, and in the lowest-priced six-cylinder car to be marketed by the Lanchester concern, it costs £325.

Finally, there is a most important new model which will not be at the Motor Show, but at Olympia's rival, the Ford Show, at the Albert Hall, particulars of which will be found on another page.

The new Ford, which I saw on the Continent, is startling as regards both performance and price.

These are all the new cars. There are one or two yet to come before the Motor Show opens. We have yet to hear publicly announced the new Austin, the V-8-engined luxury car which has been built in the Riley factory.

Sunbeam's "Come-Back"

Then, so I am told, the Sunbeam factory has a surprise for us. Let it be remembered that this famous firm, in the old days, produced some of the leading cars. They are making a "come-back" after a period of acute depression.

Yes, there will be lots that is new to see at Olympia.

ROUND ABOUT by The Showman

THERE has been a lot of shouting about a film called "Mary of Scotland" (Incidentally, some great mind must have thought this a better title than "Mary, Queen of Scots"), and I remember a similar fuss about another historical film called "Christina of Sweden."

Note, please, that I have used the word "historical."

Now I want you to do me a favour. I want you to accompany me into the year 2036—a hundred years hence. Hollywood is still producing historical films, and its latest is "The Old School Tie," with Mr. Stanley Baldwin as hero.

Old School Tie

HISTORICAL drama reaches dizzy heights in "The Old School Tie." Mr. Baldwin, an old Harrovian, is deeply moved to learn that Mussolini also went to Harrow, and promises him his support. Mr. Eden, an old Etonian, is deeply moved to learn that the Emperor also went to Eton, and promises him his support.

"We must drop sanctions!" says Baldwin to Eden. "There must be war!" says Eden to Baldwin. Then Baldwin has an inspiration and says to Eden, "old man, the Eton and Harrow match shall decide!" And Eden says to Baldwin, "Old man, that's O.K. by me!"

What a fever of excitement there is when the Duchess of Athol, bowling for Harrow, takes six wickets with six balls and wins for the School and the Duke!

Grand Entertainment

THE critics admitted that there were some historical inaccuracies. "Neither the Emperor nor Mussolini," said one, "ever went to an English public school; and the Duchess of Athol could not have been a Harrovian as Harrow did not become a co-educational establishment, admitting boys and girls, until 1904. Even so, it is doubtful that an Old Girl would have been allowed to play."

However, they said (with one or two spiteful exceptions) such objections were for the finicky and pedantic antiquarians. "The Old School Tie," as a whole, was grand entertainment on a lavish scale, was packed with colour, and in the lowest-priced six-cylinder car to be marketed by the Lanchester concern, it costs £325.

Harold Hengist, the giant "Blond Apollo" of Texas, had the chance of his screen career as Mr. Baldwin, and made the most of it.

WAR DE LUXE

THE chattering about the Spanish civil war are excellent themselves. One, in Biarritz, describes hotel talk of casualties among acquaintances in the fighting, and proceeds—

"And one hears that the Duke of Alba's magnificent palace in Madrid, filled with priceless treasures, occupied by the families of Government troops. With shudders we turn away, and since we cannot help, we try to forget."

It is the absence of any sense of proportion that is so amazing; and as if to emphasise it, the bit about the Duke of Alba's palace is set in black type.

Terry tells Suzy he'll never tell Andre of their marriage. Suzy feeling she must at last confess everything to Andre, returns to the hospital. Unseen, she sees Andre and a woman embracing each other.

CHAPTER TEN

"Suzy has gone back to father," Andre told Terry when he called the next day. "She came in for just a minute this morning. Said there was nothing to do here and she didn't like leaving father alone with the servants. That was part truth, but between ourselves, I think she was a bit afraid here."

"To-morrow, but I can't go up in the air for ten days or so. I'm going to Nice, the doctors seem to think a little sea air and sunshine are indicated. I asked Suzy if she would like to go too, thought maybe she'd like to see the Riviera, but she was firm about going back to Paris. Not especially flattering to me, but as it is all for the best, I am glad she went to father. You'll be here when I get back, won't you?"

On the day after Andre returned from his rest and was flying, his new plane for the first time, a French officer introduced Terry to Madame de Chabris. She gave him an intent look, followed by a ravishing smile.

"Pardon me, Captain Moore—but have we ever met before? In Russia, perhaps?"

"I have never been in Russia, Madame. And I'm sure we never have met before. I could not have forgotten where and when, I assure you, if I had ever seen you before."

"Well, if you put it that way, I must take your word for it. I'm always thinking I've seen some one somewhere before, and since the war I've become worse than ever. Uniforms do have a tendency to bring out similarities in human beings. But differences in human beings. But now that we have met, won't you come to see me? This evening, a few friends will be at my chateau where I'm living and I hope you will be among them."

Terry said he would be charmed to come, as she moved on across the field.

"She is fascinating," said Terry to the officer. "Who is she, anyway?"

"A remarkable woman and a great help to us in keeping up the morale of the men. You'd have met before this, but she has been away. She has a place in Nice and it was there Captain Charville went to recuperate. They are great friends."

The sight of Andre coming down in a perfect landing attracted their attention just then. But Terry's mind was not altogether on that. He was thinking of Madame de Chabris and Andre and Suzy.

It was a charming party that evening, gay but informal. Watching the hostess, Terry said to himself that she would be equally at ease at the most elaborate ball, but during the war of course she would not err by any show of ostentation. He decided she was one who would always do the correct thing in the correct way. Andre said to himself that she was quite frankly, she showed him no special attention. She was, as a good hostess must be, equally interested in all her guests. He had been foolish to attach any importance to what he had learned that afternoon.

The next evening, however, his vague discomfort returned. There had been a secret meeting of the officers. The squadron was to take off as light was breaking, Andre a few minutes ahead of the others. It was suggested that the men retire early. But Andre did not return to the hotel. He told Terry he had a call to make. He smiled as he said:

Baron de Charville as they entered the drawing room after their dinner, suggested to Suzy that as she looked tired, she had best retire early. An old friend was coming in for a little chat with him, so he would not miss her. She picked up a magazine and began looking at it listlessly. Suddenly she gasped; her face was set and white.

"What is it, dear?" he asked anxiously.

"Just some pictures at the front—they shouldn't print such things. I'm sorry to have a fit of nerves like this. I think I'll go to bed. There's the bell—I'll run along before your friend comes in."

She had just enough presence of mind to take the paper with her. She did not want him to see there were no pictures of twisted wire, bombs bursting or mangled bodies. She rang for Albert. Told him she had to be away for a night—perhaps most of the following day. She could not explain but it was of the utmost importance. He was to tell the baron she was all right, had slept well, had been awakened early by a telephone call from an old friend from New York and had gone to see her.

A few hours later she was at the hotel near the flying field. Captain Charville was not in, she was told. But the English officer had come in just a few minutes before. She ran up the stairs and burst into his room.

"Thank God, you're here," she said. "Don't waste a minute asking questions. I have only an hour or so before I must go back. Look at this, Terry—look."

He took the magazine and read the caption: "Madame de Chabris and the famous ace Captain Andre Charville at Nice."

"I'm sorry, Suzy, if this agitates you," he said. "But—"

"This is fantastic, Suzy—"

"Listen to me, Terry. That is the woman who shot you. I saw her plain, twice. Do you think I could ever forget—or be mistaken?"

"That's why she asked if we'd met—trying to test me. Come, we'll go to her house. I'm quite sure Andre is there."

"We can't Terry—not until we and Andre. He may be in actual danger now. And there's another thing. We can't have him dragged into this mess. It would ruin his career. Worse than that, it would kill his father. It's up to us to protect that dear old man from any possible sorrow or disgrace."

"I told you once you were not dumb. I tell you that again," Terry said. "I see your head is working better than mine."

"She said nothing as they drove at a terrific speed away from the village out on the country road. When they reached the house they found it in darkness, except for one light in an upper room."

As they crept quietly up the path, Terry spoke in a low, strange voice. "I'll not tell you to keep your courage. Heaven only knows what we may be letting ourselves in for, but I know whatever it is, you will face it. I want you to know I think you are the bravest person, without any exception, I have ever seen."

There was a long wait after they rang the bell, before the door was cautiously opened by the servant.

"Pardon me," said the servant, "but it is very late and Madame gave strict orders—"

"She is expecting us," said Terry firmly. "She knew we were coming to bring her a most important message, perhaps she meant to admit me herself. I can see by the light that she is waiting for us. We need not be announced."

Holding Suzy firmly by the arm, he had rushed past the butler and was half way up the long flight of stairs.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the butler. "You awakened me from a sound sleep and I did not recognize you in the darkness."

At the head of the stairs was the room with the light. The door was not locked. Without knocking, they opened it and rushed in. From below, the butler was watching intently.

"Suzy," gasped Andre. Then fighting for composure, he turned to his hostess. "I don't understand this unceremonious entrance—probably your unexpected, uninvited guests will explain it to everyone's satisfaction. In the meantime, Madame de Chabris, may I presume to call you Suzy?"

"And I, too, know Madame de Chabris," said Suzy calmly. "She may not recall me—we met under rather peculiar circumstances."

"Never mind that now," said Terry. "It is not important."

"I am delighted to have you with us, even though your arrival was a trifle out of the ordinary," said Madame de Chabris graciously.

And now, Madame," said Andre. "But as I am responsible, in a roundabout way, for this intrusion, I demand that my wife and Captain Moore offer you their apologies for their outrageous behaviour."

"Andre," said Terry. "We will explain to you later. It is imperative that you come with us at once."

"Since when did you take to issuing orders to me?" asked Andre. "As for my wife—even a jealous woman—"

"Andre," said Suzy firmly. "I will explain. This isn't jealousy. I am no longer a wife. We hoped you would go with us quickly and quietly. As you will not, I must tell you—"

"Suzy," cried Terry warningly. "She went on as if she had not heard him."

Declares Adventure Distorted BY IMAGINATIVE PASSENGERS

"Our fellow passengers aboard the Nellore have vivid imagination, and too much time on their hands for gossip," was the bitter comment made by Miss S. Clark when informed of the story, related to a morning newspaper representative by passengers aboard the Nellore, of the alleged experiences of Miss Clark and her companion, Miss L. Hablethwaite, in Manila.

"What was nothing more than a startling experience has been magnified and distorted by passengers aboard this ship, and by newspapers throughout the Far East, into a terrible calumny."

"We have carefully refrained from telling anybody but the Master of this ship what actually happened. We cabled our people in Brisbane in order to allay the fears occasioned them by erroneous reports in Australian papers but not another soul has been told anything."

"Yet some of the people aboard this ship seem to know everything," said Miss Clark.

Passengers aboard the Nellore related to Hongkong newspapermen a strange story of how the two ladies, who had visited the famous Santa Anna Cabaret in Manila, were allegedly "doped" by cigarettes by two men, and then taken to a strange house.

Miss Hablethwaite, according to the passengers' stories, leapt from the third storey window of the house and injured herself in the fall.

Neither Miss Clark nor Miss Hablethwaite would comment on the accuracy of the report.

"All I can say is that we went through a dreadful experience. Nevertheless there has been much exaggeration," said Miss Clark.

"We escaped in time, and were very lucky to do so."

"Now we want to forget all about it. We came to the East for a vacation and want to enjoy the rest of it."

"We are leaving the Nellore in Japan and will stay there for a month before returning to Australia. Maybe by then all the excitement will have died down."

"The only thing we are worried about is the reports that have been sent to Australia. We have cabled reassuring messages to our people, but we don't want our friends to believe that all sorts of dreadful things have happened to us. They haven't."

SNATCHED ROLL OF NOTES

NEWCOMER GETS GAOL TERM

Going into the Sul Cheong money-changer's shop, 10 Des Voeux Road West, on Saturday afternoon, Lau Fun, 24, unemployed, tendered a twenty cents Kwangtung note to be changed into Hongkong money. The accountant, Chan Hoi, was at the time holding in his hand nine $50 banknotes, and when he reached into a drawer to change the twenty cents note, Lau Fun put his hand through the iron grille and snatched the banknotes from his hand and ran out of the shop. He was chased by two folk and arrested.

Lau Fun was charged before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, with larceny from the person, and was sentenced to four months' hard labour.

Detective-Inspector Johnson said defendant had come down from the country the previous day.

J. ISIDOR STRAUSS WIDELY KNOWN

New York, Oct. 4. Mr. Jesse Isidor Strauss, until recently United States Ambassador to Paris, died here to-day.—Reuter.

Jesse Isidor Strauss, the American business man who became an Ambassador, was born in New York in January, 1872. He studied at Harvard where he took his B.A. degree in 1893. His father and mother were drowned in the Titanic disaster in 1912.

Strauss joined the dry goods firm of R. H. Macy and Co., started at the bottom of the ladder, determined to learn all the details of the business, and by 1910 had become its president. He and his two brothers managed the great store which employs 10,000 people.

In search for novelties—new goods or new models—he travelled much in Europe, especially in France, Germany, England and Spain. He speaks several languages.

But buying and selling were not his sole preoccupation. He was a collector and also a politician. A strong Democrat, he supported Roosevelt's campaign for the Presidency by speeches and generous gifts to the party funds. During the banking crisis in the spring of 1933 he did his best to exert a calming influence. When all the banks closed, he inserted a notice in the newspapers, which ran:

"I have confidence in my Government and in our banks. I do not expect the impossible. Never has it been possible for everyone to put all his money in his pockets or his safe. I know that if I try to obtain all my money, I shall make the situation worse. I shall not lose my head." In March, 1933, he was appointed Ambassador to France.

Strauss provided the funds for extensions at Harvard University, of whose Board of Overseers he was a member. He also belongs to the Council on Foreign Relations, the Foreign Policy Association and the American Academy of Political and Social Science. His business interests included directorships in the New York Life Insurance Co. and the North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. He is also a trustee of a savings bank and a hospital.

EXHIBITION NOW OPEN

A varied selection of the best of the entries in the sixth annual Amateur Photographic Exhibition organized by the Telegraph is being exhibited on the top floor of the Gloucester Hotel, as from to-day. The Exhibition, which remains open all day, will continue up to and including Friday.

In all, there are some 500 pictures on view, demonstrating a high standard of artistic merit. There is no charge for admission.

In connection with the Exhibition, Dr. F. Bunje, one of the Judges, will give a talk on the entries, in the exhibition room, at 5.30 p.m. to-morrow (Tuesday), to which all interested are invited.

A further remand of one week was granted Detective-Inspector A. H. Elston by Mr. Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, when Sze Hok-chuen, aged 30, unemployed mason, made another appearance on a charge of robbery at No. 229 Nathan Road, second floor, on September 22, when a large haul of jewellery and money was taken. Inspector Elston intimated that if the Crown could get all the facts together earlier, the Court would be informed and the case fixed for an early hearing.
